COLLEGE and CONSERVATORY OF NOTRE DAME

SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA

THE College of Notre Dame was founded in 1851. In 1899, it was accredited to the State University at Berkeley. This gives its graduates, recommended by the Faculty, the privilege of passing, without entrance examinations, to the State University, Stanford University, the State Normal School, and all Western Colleges. Though mainly designed for older students, a Grade Department is carried on preparatory to the Secondary Department. To graduates of the latter department, special courses are offered in Literature, Languages, and the Arts. For the last named course, particular advantages in environment and training are afforded. Partial Course Students are permitted to attend certain classes, and a Business Course is offered to those desiring it. To those who wish to make Music their specialty, the Conservatory offers peculiar advantages, graduating qualified students with due honors. Regular class students are likewise given every opportunity of fine training in music, as well as in art and in needle-work. Super-added, is the moral and religious culture of which the School makes a specialty. Every care is given to the health and comfort of the students.

A "Who" Among Catholic Publications

The Magnificat

An Illustrated Monthly Published by the Sisters of Mercy, and Blessed by His Holiness, Pope Pius X.

The complimentary notices of the press tell the reason of its rapid growth in public favor. On the other side of the Atlantic the "Dean of Literary Workers," Rev. Matthew Russell, S. J., tells the readers of the September Irish Monthly:

> An excellent magazine is THE MAGNIFICAT, which is published at 435 Union Street, Manchester, New Hampshire, U. S. A. It is the neatest magazine we are acquainted with, and only a dollar a year, though of quite stately dimensions; and its contents are marked by great variety and high literary merit. Its cheapness is a marvel to us, for we have always understood that printing is more expensive in the States.

And at home, in the September issue also, the editor of the excellent Christian Family is kind enough to say:

> THE MAGNIFICAT, published at Manchester, N. H., bids fair to outrank all its fellows as an ideal Catholic magazine. The Editor seems to have the rare faculty of gathering around her the sprightliest writers to be found. There is never a dull page in the entire magazine, and the Book Notes are real reviews, not a glance at the title and author, and a few general remarks such as we have come to expect from the generality of reviews. The price is ridiculously low for such a high-class periodical, being only $1.00 a year.

NOTRE DAME, IND.

IN GRATEFUL RECOGNITION OF HIS SERVICES TO CATHOLIC LITERATURE, HIS INTEREST IN THIS BOOK, AND FRIENDSHIP FOR ITS EDITOR.

LETTER OF RECOMMENDATION.

Cardinal's Residence,
408 North Charles Street,
Baltimore.

June the 21st, 1910.

Dear Miss Curtis:

I am most pleased to learn that your new work, "The American Catholic Who's Who," is soon to be published, and knowing as I do of the great success your recent admirable work, "Roads to Rome," met with, I feel sure that this, your latest effort, will be rewarded with the success it deserves.

I take pleasure in recommending it as a work eminently useful and of great interest not only to Catholics, but to the public at large.

Most faithfully yours in Xto.,

J. Card. Gibbons,
Archbishop of Baltimore.

EDITOR'S PREFACE.

When the Editor of the A. C. W. W. was a little girl, one of her favorite books, found in her grandfather's library, was Lodge's Peerage. For its titles, degrees, dates she cared nothing, but what captivated the child's imagination was its history; its account of what people had done. When, in later years, that fascinating biography, the English Catholic Who's Who, fell into her hands, it recalled the earlier and beloved book. Therefore it did not seem strange that she should consent, when she was asked by several ecclesiastics whose opinion she valued, to undertake the compiling and editing of an American Catholic Who's Who. The only hesitation on her part was for fear her physical and mental equipment would not be equal to the task. Viewed in the aggregate it seemed on too large a scale to be undertaken, but the Editor saw from the beginning that like all great enterprises the work only needed to be classified and systematized in order to simplify it. A plan was drawn up, carefully considered, and adhered to step by step throughout a period of twenty-one months, during which eight thousand Catholics received a notice asking for their record. Nearly all the sketches finally accepted for publication were, therefore, obtained at first hand; about one-fourth being received through Catholic agents in different parts of the country. These records have been cast, in their essentials, in a certain form, while at the same time some scope has been allowed for the narrative style, as in the valuable English Catholic Who's Who; the Editor believing that by so doing the book would be made more interesting than if it were a mere dry recital of facts and dates.

Difficulties, obstacles, and disappointments were not lacking as the work progressed. There were those who thought they saw in it pride, vanity, and worldliness; others insisted it was to be a mere social register; still others, who knew they ought not to be left out, refused to go in the book; a fourth class were those who were utterly indifferent to the whole scheme.

Again and again, through the Catholic press of the country, whose Editors with only three exceptions lent to the book intelligent comprehension and noble support, the Editor of the A. C. W. W. has stated what the work is, and what it is not; that it is designed not to exploit the individual as such, but to individualize him in order to show in the concrete — to each other and to the non-Catholic world — what Catholics have done and are doing to add to the prestige, dignity, and power of the Church. In its completed form the book tells of noble effort, of men and women who have frequently risen from humble beginnings to positions of honor and influence, of those with a better start in life who have used their position and talents for the highest purposes; it tells, also, of many an ancient Catholic lineage on which to look back with gratitude and pride; of those who have entered the Church, overcoming peril and obstacle. To the Editor, through whose hands passed all these many records, the work has been from the first Ad Majorem Dei Gloriam; and it is in this sense that the work is now launched.

Because it is of the American people, the A. C. W. W. is cosmopolitan. It embraces diverse types of Americans, and includes a few foreigners who are our devoted friends. The one question asked, and as far as possible answered throughout the work, has been: "Is this a person whom Catholics, and we may say non-Catholics, will want to know about and ought to know about?"

The Editor wishes first to record her grateful thanks and appreciation to her friend, collaborator and adviser in this work, Mr. William Stetson Merrill (A.B., Harvard), of the Newberry Library, Chicago, whose judgment, prudence, and business ability went far toward making the work a success. It was the Editor's desire to name him as co-Editor; this he positively declined, on the ground that he had not done enough work and planning to warrant it; nevertheless, without his staunch support, both moral and material, the Editor knows it would have been impossible to carry on her task. Her special thanks are also due to Mr. C. C. Copeland, and Mr. Charles A. Mair of Chicago, whose generosity and material help made it possible to carry on the financial part of the work.

There is a long list of those who should be publicly thanked, for encouragement and support, and for helping to get names and sketches of people for the book. Among the Hierarchy and Reverend clergy are: His Eminence Cardinal Gibbons; the Most Reverend Archbishops, Ireland of St. Paul, Farley of New York, and Glennon of St. Louis; the Right Reverend Bishops Allen of Mobile, Garrigan of Sioux City, and Guertin of Manchester; the Right Reverend Monsignor Shahan, Rector of the Catholic University of America; the Very Rev. John J. Cavanaugh, C.S.C., President of the University of Notre Dame; the Rev. Daniel E. Hudson, C.S.C., of the Ave Maria; the Rev. John J. Wynne, S.J., Editor of the Catholic Encyclopedia; the Rev. Edward Spillane, S.J., and the Rev. Lewis Drummond, S.J., of America; the Rev. W. P. McIntyre of the Rosary; the Rev. George M. Searle, C.S.P.; and the Rev. John J. Burke, C.S.P., Editor of the Catholic World; the Rev. Peter C. Gannon of the True Voice, Omaha, Neb.; the Rev. Lawrence Mulhane of Mt. Vernon, Ohio; the Rev. James Newcomb of Wheeling, West Virginia; the Rev. Dr. Magri of Richmond, Va.; the Rev. M. J. Foley, Editor of the Western Catholic of Quincy, Ill.; the Rev. John Talbot Smith, of Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., who assisted the Editor with the theatrical list; Rev. James Anthony Walsh of the Field Afar, Boston, Mass., who suggested the names of missionaries; Rev. Edwin Drury, Nerinx, Ky.; and the Rev. William Richard Harris of the Intermountain Catholic, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Among the laity the Editor's thanks are due to Mr. Charles Phillips, Editor of the Monitor; and a personal friend, of San Francisco; Mr. George Wharton James, the author, of Pasadena, Cal.; Mr. John P. O'Hara of the Catholic Sentinel, Portland, Oregon; Mr. John B. McGauran of the Denver Catholic Register, Denver, Col.; Mr. Anton Basetich of the Croatian Publishing Co., Butte, Montana; Mr. Harrison Conrard of Flagstaff, Arizona; Mr. Arthur Preuss, Editor of the Catholic Fortnightly Review, Bridgeton, Mo.; Mr. John Paul Chew, Editor of Church Progress, St. Louis, Mo.; Mr. Joseph Matt, Editor of the Wanderer, St. Paul, Minn., who obtained many sketches of German-Americans; Mr. Joseph A. Westhauser of the Northwestern Chronicle, St. Paul; the late lamented Charles J. O'Malley of the New World, Chicago, and the present editor of the same paper, Dr. Thomas O'Hagan; Mr. Humphrey Desmond of the Catholic Citizen, Milwaukee, Wis.; Mr. Joseph H. Meier, Editor of Wiltzius Catholic Directory, ibid.; Miss Mary Florence Taney of Covington, Ky.; Miss Anna E. O'Hare of the Catholic Universe, Cleveland, O.; Mr. James T. Carroll of the Catholic Columbian, Columbus, O.; Miss Julia Walsh of Cincinnati, O.; Mr. Patrick Haltigan of the National Hibernian, Washington, D. C., and Miss Marie Agnes Gannon, ibid.; Miss Julia Laskey of the Public Library, ibid.; Mr. Austin Jenkins Lilly of Baltimore; Miss Marie Turner, ibid.; Mr. Raphael Semmes of Savannah, Georgia; Mr. William Campbell, Editor of the Southern Messenger, San Antonio, Texas; Mr. Thomas G. Rapier of the Picayune, New Orleans, La.; Mr. John J. O'Shea of the Catholic Standard and Times, Philadelphia, Pa.; Mr. Martin I. J. Griffin of the American Catholic Historical Researches, Philadelphia, Pa.; Mrs. Honor Walsh, ibid.; Mrs. B. Ellen Burke, Editor of the Sunday Companion, New York; Mr. Ernest Harvier of the Sunday Democrat, ibid.; Mr. Thomas B. Connery, ibid.; Dr. James J. Walsh, ibid., who assisted the Editor with the physicians' list; Mr. William A. King of the Catholic Union and Times, Buffalo, N. Y.; Miss Christina Riley, ibid.; Mr. Stephen Henry Horgan of Hoboken, N. J.; Mr. John J. Cleary of the Sunday Advertiser, Trenton, N. J.; Mr. Thomas Walsh of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Pay Inspector John Furey (retired), ibid.; Mrs. Mary H. Dowd of Manchester, N. H.; Mr. Thomas Ackland of Boston, Mass.; Miss Katherine Conway, ibid.; Mr. Henry Coyle of South Boston, Mass.; Mr. J. Arthur Favreau of Boston, Mass., who obtained sketches of French-Americans; Miss Anna T. Sadlier of Montreal, and Hon. Joseph A. Chisholm, Mayor of Halifax, who rendered valuable aid with the Canadian list.

Among foreign contributors the Editor is indebted to Mr. Charles Fisk Beach and Madame A. Morel, of Paris, to three others in England, Belgium, and Italy, who prefer to remain unknown, and to Messrs. Burns and Oates, of London.

Since this work was begun, some of the people who sent in their records have died; these sketches the Editor decided to publish, with the announcement of the person's decease.

In compiling the clergy list, the Editor felt that the devotion and self sacrifice of the priesthood entitled them all to mention in the Catholic Who's Who, but as this was impossible because of their number, and as they are all listed in the Catholic Directory, it was decided not to go below the rank of Monsignor and Very Reverend, except where a priest was an author, educator, scientist, musician, missionary, or had followed some special line of work, or held some especial position, outside the regular parochial duty.

In conclusion the Editor asks that those who note any errors in the book will correct them; and that all who are interested will send their own records, or sketches of their friends, for a second edition. The first edition, full as it is, contains many omissions; these it is hoped will be supplied after the book is out, and its character and value as a reference work become known.

All such communications can be sent direct to her or through the publishers.

To the Catholic public this work is now entrusted by the Editor. If it meets with a kindly reception her labor will not have been in vain.

HIS HOLINESS POPE PIUS X

JOSEPH SARTO.

Bishop of Rome; Vicar of Jesus Christ; two hundred and sixty-fourth successor of St. Peter; Supreme Pontiff of the Universal Church; Patriarch of the West; Primate of Italy; Archbishop and Metropolitan of the Roman Province; Sovereign of the Temporal Dominions of the Holy Roman Church.

B. at Riese, near Venice, June 2, 1835; grandfather was a soldier in the Papal Army under Pope Gregory XVI. Ed. at Treviso and Padua; ordained priest September 18, 1858; Chancellor, 1875; Vicar Capitular, 1877; consecrated Bishop of Mantua, November 10, 1884; created Cardinal and Patriarch of Venice, June 15, 1893; his appointment to the patriarchate gave rise to a dispute with the Italian Government, which claimed the right, as successor of the Republic of Venice, to nominate the Patriarch; this claim was not allowed by the Holy See, and the personal qualities of Monsignor Sarto finally won over the Government. In the administration of his important diocese he showed himself a strong and competent prelate, reforming a number of abuses, and winning the love and veneration of all his people, especially by his devotion to the poor, and the modesty and simplicity of his life.

On August 4, 1903, he was elected Pope, and five days later was crowned Supreme Father of the Universal Church. He entered upon his pontificate with the reputation of being not only a deeply religious man and wise administrator, but of a learned scholar and friend of the arts. Passionately devoted to music, His Holiness has sought to raise Church music to the highest plane; it was through him that Don Luigi Perosi, the priest composer, was first brought to public attention.

Shortly after her conversion, Mrs. Lathrop entered on a systematic course of study of cancer and its treatment at Bellevue hospital, N. Y. She dwelt in the slums and nursed the patients in their homes, unearthing conditions that would have appalled the stoutest heart. On the death of her husband, Mrs. Lathrop secured a home on Cherry street, New York City, and here she began her work for afflicted souls. But so rapidly did the field of work widen, so many poor incurables daily turned out of the hospitals, and others too poor to pay their way, came to her, that a new home at Hawthorne in Westchester County, was secured, and a community under the Rulè of the Third Order of St. Dominic was formed to aid her in her Christ-like work. No one is received if he can afford to pay. This charity is for those who are pronounced incurable and turned out of the hospitals, and is known as St. Rose's Free Cancer Hospital, with the country house in Westchester County. Mother Alphonsa is the author of "Along the Shore" (poems); "Memories of Hawthorne" (written with her husband); and "A Story of Courage." Address: Rosary Hill, Hawthorne, N. Y.

AVERY, Mrs. Martha Gallison (Moore):

Author, lecturer, educator, Socialist; convert to the Church; b. April 6, 1851, in Steuben, Me.; d. of A. K. P. Moore. Her ancestors were among the pioneer settlers of Massachusetts, the eastern portion of which later became the State of Maine. On her father's side she is Irish, Scotch and Dutch; on her mother's she is English. A four-fold stream of Revolutionary blood flows in her veins, Major John Moore of Bunker Hill fame being one of her kinsmen. Prior to the War of the Rebellion General Samuel Moore, her grandfather, was a dominant factor in state politics for half a century. Ed. at the public schools, she regards her fifteen years of intellectual discipline under a master in Cosmic Law as her most valuable period of study, one that later led her to the door of the Catholic Church, which she entered on May 1, 1904, being baptized by Rev. Father O'Sullivan, S.J., at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Boston, Mass. Mrs. Avery entered public life as a charter member of the First Nationalist Club of Boston, which was made up of such distinguished men and women as Rev. Edward Everett Hale, Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, etc. Carrying the principles of the "Nationalization of Industry and thereby the Promotion of the Brotherhood of Man" to their logical expression, Mrs. Avery became a Socialist. For seven years she was Director of the Karl Marx class that taught the economics of Socialism. Later the class became known as the Boston School of Political Economy. Mrs. Moore-Avery is acknowledged as an authority upon the philosophy, the history, the economic theory, and the tactics of International Socialism, and as a master in the science of Political Economy. In an editorial in The Outlook, March 20, 1909, ex-president Roosevelt recommends a book of which Mrs. Moore-Avery is the author in collaboration with David Goldstein, a convert and one of her economic students, "Socialism: The Nation of Fatherless Children." During the twelve years of her membership in the Socialist parties, Mrs. Avery was constantly in the lecture field, aiding the cause by voice and pen, until (in 1903) she was led to recognize that in the world of practical matters Socialism is the anti-Christ, as Modernism is the anti-Christ in the world of theoretical conception. One year later she became a member of the Church. At present she is the head of the Boston School of Political Economy, training a group of brilliant young men to meet the erroneous arguments and the sophistical statements of Socialist propaganda. As a lecturer she is cited by the press of New York as being "wonderfully eloquent," and by that of Massachusetts as "one of the greatest woman orators of the world." She is a contributor to the National Civic Federation Review, to Social Justice; writes special editorials for The Boston Traveler; has very near completion a book entitled "Twenty-five Socialists Answered," besides the MS. of a work on the Primal Principles of Political Economy. M. in 1880 to Millard Filmore Avery. Address: 202 West Springfield St., Boston, Mass.

BEDDING, Thomas:

Editor; b. in London, England. Came to the United States, and now resides in New York City, where his business interests lie in that new, interesting, and (when rightly directed) instructive entertainment, known as the moving picture show. Its growth in New York and the rest of the country has been rapid. In the great metropolis there are over five hundred of these places already (1910) established, and there is every prospect that the number will be doubled in the next decade. The business has its organ, a weekly publication called The Moving Picture World, of which Mr. Bedding is the editor. It is said on most reliable authority that the company or companies financing these shows pay Mr. Edison $10,000 every week for the use of one of his inventions necessary to the successful operation of the pictures. As this is, of course, only one of the items of expense, some idea may be formed of the weekly and annual cost of this kind of entertainment, which directly or indirectly affects the manufacturers of "animated photographs," as they are called in the trade, illustrated songs, lantern lectures, and slide-makers. Address: The Moving Picture World, New York, N. Y.

BEHAN, Mrs. Kate (Walker):

BLISS, Mrs. George:

D. of Henry H. Casey (convert and member of a well-known New England family; descendant of Charles Chauncey, second president of Harvard College), and Anais (Blanchet) Casey; grand-daughter of Mme. Roux, née de la Rousselière. M. George Bliss, the distinguished Catholic lawyer, legal adviser of the late Archbishop Corrigan, as well as to several religious communities; created by Pope Leo XIII a Knight Commander of St. Gregory. Mr. Bliss, who died in 1897, was a descendant of two prominent New England families — Dwight on his mother's side. He became a Catholic in 1884, and was baptized in the Bliss private chapel by Monsignor Capel, who was his godfather. Mrs. Bliss was instrumental, with others, in establishing in New York City one of its best charities, the absolutely free Day School and Crêche for French children, located at 69 Washington Square, N. Y. This school came into existence in the time of Archbishop Corrigan, and is entirely dependent on voluntary contributions, receiving nothing from the municipal authorities. Mother Madeline, now deceased, was its foundress, and Mrs. Bliss soon became Vice-President of the association of ladies who aided the French Sisters of the Sainte Croix in this work, and is still Honorary Vice-President. Mr. and Mrs. Bliss planned and worked for this Charity, and enlisted the interest of their friends, until it became firmly fixed. Mrs. Bliss is President of the Tabernacle Society, whose headquarters are at the Convent of Perpetual Adoration, at Fourteenth and V Sts., N.W., Washington, D. C. Address: 2132 Bancroft Place, N.W., Washington, D. C.

BROWNE, Mrs. Peter Arrell:

D. of Thomas Parkin and Julianna M. Scott, of Baltimore; b. April 14, 1834; ed. at Mt. St. Joseph's College, Emmitsburg; in October, 1860, married Peter Arrell Browne, Jr., s. of Peter Arrell and Harriet (Harper) Browne, of Philadelphia, going to that city to live; came to Baltimore in 1861. Mr. Browne was a member of the Baltimore and Maryland Bars, and was Auditor of the Superior Court of Baltimore City until his death, in 1878. Mrs. Browne's father, Hon. Thomas Parkin Scott, was Chief Judge of the Supreme Bench of Baltimore City, and her grandfather, Hon. John Scott, was Judge of the ancient Court of Oyer & Terminer, now abolished. Judge Thomas Parkin Scott was a member of the Maryland Legislature in 1861, and was imprisoned by the Union authorities, along with other members, for his refusal to take the oath of allegiance to the United States; was released after fourteen months, and disbarred on that account. Despite his refusal to take the oath, so great was his popularity, that he was elected judge, over the strongest opponent that could be found to run against him; he remained on the Bench until his death. Among his ancestors were many who fought in the War of the Revolution, and interesting relics of those warlike times are still in possession of the family. Mrs. Browne can trace her descent from the Duke of Buccleugh of Scotland. Address: 1603 St. Paul St., Baltimore, Md.

BURKE, Mrs. B. Ellen (Burke):

B. in 1850, at Helena, Lawrence County, N. Y., of Irish parentage; ed. in country schools, at a college preparatory academy, and the New York Normal School, at Oswego, N. Y.; m. Charles A. Burke, lawyer, of Malone, N. Y. In 1896 organized Teachers' Institutes for the instructors in Catholic schools. From the first the Archbishops and Bishops of the United States approved and encouraged the work, and the Catholic teachers were brought together in large numbers from distant states and from nearly all the Teaching Orders. She had as assistants some of the ablest Catholic teachers in the country — thirty-two in all formed the faculty. In places where the attendance warranted and the Superiors desired, graded institutes were held. In all cases the institute was held under the auspices of the Ordinary of the Diocese. Large institutes were held in New York City, in nearly every state in the United States, and later in Canada. She originated improved methods of teaching in the Sunday Schools where the work was done chiefly by lay teachers. The subject was taken up at the Catholic Summer School, Cliff Haven, N. Y., where Christian Doctrine Conferences have been held nearly every season. Gave talks and lectures at the Catholic Summer School; Madison, Wis.; Detroit, Mich.; and at the Catholic Winter School, New Orleans; obliged, after four years, to discontinue the work because of ill health, since which time she has only occasionally addressed the institutes. In 1889 accepted the position of Editor for the Catholic publishers, D. H. McBride & Co. In January, 1900, appeared the first number of The Sunday Companion, a weekly publication for Catholic young people. Mrs. Burke remained its editor until, on the retirement of the McBrides, she bought the paper, of which she is now owner and editor. In 1906, began publishing a Catholic monthly, The Helper, for parents and teachers. Joined in the great movement instituted in the Archdiocese of New York for the training of the laity to assist in teaching Christian Doctrine; taught the first "Method Class" and was the only teacher for the first year — now the faculty of this New York Normal School for Catechists, begun by Mrs. Burke, numbers twenty-eight. Has written and compiled a set of readers for Catholic Schools, and two geographies. Contributor to her own and other periodicals. Address: The Sunday Companion, 234–235 Broadway, New York City.

CAMARILLO, Juan E.:

B. April 10, 1870, San Buenaventura; s. of Juan Camarillo, who emigrated to California from Mexico in 1834, and became a trader with the Indians between San Francisco and San Diego, disposing of their wares and receiving currency therefor. The hospitable mission fathers gave him a room in which to lodge, and there the Indians came and transacted their business. With the funds thus realized, amounting to about $3,000, he opened a store in Santa Barbara. He married Senorita Martina Altagrazia Herndudez in 1840, and in 1852 moved to San Buenaventura. Juan Camarillo was educated at St. Vincent's College, Cal., and later devoted his attention to agriculture and business; is one of the large land owners of California, and identified in an official capacity with nearly every banking institution in the county; is a Director of the First National Bank of Ventura, the Home Savings Bank, and also of the Ojai State Bank at Nordhoff. Last summer he deeded to Rt. Rev. Bishop Conaty, for school purposes, the old Camarillo homestead in Buenaventura, and he is now planning to build near his home at Camarillo a chapel as a memorial to his parents. This chapel will be for the benefit of all Catholics living in that part of the country. Mr. Camarillo is a Knight of Columbus, and one of the leaders of the Order in California; is Past President of Cabrillo Parlor Native Sons of the Golden West, a trustee of the Ben. Prot. Order of Elks of Santa Barbara, and President of American Latin Union No. 1. Has made a number of trips to Rome, and on each occasion was granted an audience by the Pope. Upon his last visit, the Holy Father removed from his head the white silk cap (called the solideum) which he was wearing, and presented it to Mr. Camarillo as a souvenir of his visit. The latter presented this cap to the Knights of Columbus, of Oxnard, upon his return home. His house is much admired for its beauty, and contains many paintings and rare curios gathered from all parts of the world, as well as a collection of Indian relics, many of them the handiwork of tribes now extinct. The Indian Cap of Penance, used to designate an Indian who had been guilty of crime, is in this collection. It is made in the shape of a fool's cap, and from the roots of an herb, so finely woven into a net, that it has the appearance of leather. Club: Newman Club of Los Angeles, Cal. Address: Camarillo, San Buenaventura, Cal.

CANEVIN, Rt. Rev. John Francis Regis, D.D.:

Bishop of Pittsburg, Pa.; b. in 1853, at Pittsburg, Pa.; ed. in the schools of his native city, and at St. Vincent's College and Seminary, Beatty, Pa., passing through the entire course. Ordained Priest, 1879; served successively as assistant; orphan asylum, prison and Convent Chaplain; country pastor; chancellor; and rector of the Cathedral in Pittsburg, hence his whole life has been identified with the diocese over which he now presides as Bishop. Its Catholic population numbers nearly half a million, embracing 25 or more nationalities, scattered through ten counties in Western Pennsylvania, forming the greatest steel, coal, coke, glass, and oil center in the world. A man of few words, of simple life, of boundless energy, and solid piety, the Bishop is beloved and revered by priests and people alike. Actively alive to the needs of his diocese, and with administrative ability of a rare character, he is at the same time a student. A recent pastoral on Christian Marriage exhausted in a few days an edition of 140,000 copies. His Inquirer's Guide, a brief explanation of the doctrine and teachings of the Church, has met with warm approval, and has already been through an edition of 100,000 copies. As a preacher, Bishop Canevin is intensely in earnest, with a resonant, pleasing voice, and a command of direct, pithy English. He was consecrated Titular Bishop of Sabrata, February 24, 1903, and succeeded (1904) the Rt. Rev. Richard Phelan, as Bishop of Pittsburg. Address: 136 North Craig St., Pittsburg, Pa.

CAPEL, Right Rev. Mgr. Thomas John:

B. in 1836; ordained by Cardinal Wiseman, 1858; co-founder of the Training College for School Masters at Hammersmith, London; was its Vice Principal, 1856–60; at the end of the latter year ill health prevented him from accepting the proffered principalship. He retired to Pau in the Pyrenees and here established an English speaking mission, of which he was Chaplain, 1860–68. His lecture on Bishop Colenso's works, and on Catholic doctrines attracted the Protestant public; the conversion of Lady and Miss Duncan, of Mrs. Wave, granddaughter of the Bishop of Exeter, of Miss Wilmot Chetwode the authoress, and of the Episcopalian clergyman, Rev. Harrington Moore, made him still more prominent. With restored health he returned to England and was appointed to missionary work by Cardinal Manning. December 24, 1868, he received into the Church the Marquess of Bute in the Chapel of the Sisters of Notre Dame, Southwark, in the presence of the Bishop of the diocese, Right Rev. T. Grant, an event which gained for him a place in the pages of Lothair as Mgr. Catesby, and once by a slip of Disraeli's under his own name. His sermons and doctrinal lectures delivered in London pulpits, especially in that of the old Pro-Cathedral Kensington, and one series in Rome during the Vatican Council, made him one of the most widely popular of preachers. He was named Domestic Prelate to Pius IX, 1873, in which year he founded the Catholic Public School, Kensington. From 1874–78, he was Rector of the Catholic University College just established by the Bishops of England. As financial support for the latter Institution could not be obtained, Monsignor Capel, having exhausted his own resources, resigned his position, Cardinal Manning writing to him next day: "I know and bear witness that you have strained yourself even beyond your strength." For a while the Catholic Public School continued, but was closed at a later period. In 1883 he came to the United States, preached and lectured in the chief cities and at length settled in California, accepting the Tutorship of Pio Valensin in the McCauly Valensin family at Arno, where he makes his home, but doing missionary work from the Cathedral of Sacramento as a center. In England he has published Reply to Gladstone's Vaticanism, and Ought the Queen of England to hold Diplomatic Relations with the Pope (both published by Longmans, Green & Co.); Catholic (eight editions); The Pope, the Vicar of Christ (three editions) an American Edition of Faith of Catholics (3 volumes, 3 editions), all published by Pustet & Co., of New York. Has contributed frequently to the press. Address: Arno, Cal.

CARBONE, Carmela:

Musician; b. in Buffalo, N. Y., of Italian parents; ed. at Miss Nardin's Academy, Buffalo; studied music with Miss Cronyn, of Buffalo; Santley, London. Sang in the Jesuit Church, New York, until the issue of the Papal restriction in regard to church choirs, since which time her soprano voice has been heard in the concert halls of America, Berlin, London, and the principal towns of England, which she, with her sister, Grazia, toured with Patti in 1907. An English newspaper said of them: The Signore Carbone make music primarily for musicians. The quality of her voice was pronounced pure lyric ecstasy, while her sister's was spiritual, rich and deep. Max Bruch, German composer, has associated the names of the sisters with the music of religion, by composing for their voices a duet entitled The Cross, sung for the first time at Queen's Hall, London, 1907.

CARLISLE, John G., Jr.:

CARPENTER, Paul Dillingham:

Jurist; s. of the late Matthew Hale Carpenter, one of the most distinguished and brilliant lawyers in the United States, and one of the foremost orators and debaters that ever held a seat in the national senate. He was Senator from Wisconsin from 1869 to 1875, and from 1879 to his death in 1881. Mr. Carpenter's mother is Caroline Dillingham Carpenter, daughter of Paul Dillingham, who was twice governor of Vermont, and twice representative in Congress from that State. She is also a sister of Wm. P. Dillingham, who was once governor of Vermont. On the paternal side, Paul D. Carpenter is descended from William Carpenter, who came to America in the ship Bevis, in 1638. William Carpenter, a son of the immigrant of that name, held important offices in the Massachusetts colony, and was a man of character and influence. On his mother's side, Mr. Carpenter is a descendant of John Dillingham, who came to America with the Winthrop colony in 1630, and he, too, was prominent in establishing the principles of free government. John Dillingham, the great-great-grandfather of Paul Carpenter, was a soldier under General Wolfe in the campaign against Quebec, and fell with his commander in that memorable struggle, which practically ended the French rule on this continent. Paul Dillingham Carpenter was born in Milwaukee,

January 26, 1867; ed. at private schools in Milwaukee and Washington, at the Milwaukee high school, and by private tutors; spent part of one year at Columbia Law School, New York; studied law in the offices of Quarles, Spence & Quarles of Milwaukee; was admitted to the bar, and opened a law office in Milwaukee, July 1, 1892; formed a partnership with Franz C. Eschweiler, May 1, 1894, under the firm name of Eschweiler & Carpenter, which continued for one year, and since its termination, he has conducted the business alone. His most important case is that relating to the assignment of F. T. Day, through the success of which Day's assignee will lose the greater part of claims against clients, amounting to more than $160,000. In 1902, Mr. Carpenter was elected Judge of the Probate Court of Milwaukee County, and was re-elected for a second term. At the end of the second term he declined re-election, and has since been engaged in his private practice. On November 25, 1891, he was married to Emma W., daughter of the late Franz Falk, a prominent brewer. Judge Carpenter is a member of the college society of Phi Delta Phi, Milwaukee Club, Wisconsin Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, of which he was for several years treasurer, Columbus Club of Chicago, and the Catholic Club of New York. He was at one time chairman of the committee on public opinion of the Columbian League. Address: 120 Prospect Ave., Milwaukee, Wis.

Professor at Marquette University, Milwaukee, 1881; has taught successively in the Jesuit colleges of St. Louis, Cincinnati, and St. Mary's, Kansas; from 1897 to 1909, Prefect of Studies and Vice-President, St. Ignatius College, Chicago. In 1910 transferred to St. Xavier's College, Cincinnati, Ohio. Fr. Cassilly has written a number of articles for the daily and periodical press, and during several sessions of the Illinois legislature, assisted in preventing the passage of laws to give free text-books to public school pupils, and in defeating other legislation detrimental to Catholic interests; is a member, and for one term was Vice-President of the Federation of Illinois Colleges, an organization composed of non-Catholic and Catholic colleges. At the first meeting (1899) of the Catholic Educational Association he took an active part, and has continued his membership in it to the present time. His connection with this association led him to compile a tabulated record of attendance at Catholic colleges and universities, showing the steady and pronounced advance of higher Catholic education in the United States. An article of his, Catholic Students at State Universities, which first appeared in the Ecclesiastical Review, February, 1906, was widely copied and commented on. This article, showing the large attendance of Catholic students at State universities, where they are receiving little or no spiritual guidance, led a number of bishops to station chaplains or to establish chapels or club-houses at non-Catholic universities. Address: St. Xavier's College, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Named after Charles Carroll of Carrollton; retired lawyer, philanthropist; b. November 10, 1838, Antwerp, N. Y.; s. of Clewley and Fanny (Stowde) Copeland; of Pilgrim ancestry, being descended on his father's side from the sister of John Alden. His paternal grandmother was a niece of Cotton Mather of Salem, Mass., and a great uncle, Asabel Copeland, was attached to the staff of General Lafayette during the Revolution; his mother was of the Ethan Allen Vermont stock; ed. at Wilbraham Academy, Wilbraham, Mass., until 17 years of age; peddled books and made political speeches for Buchanan in Ohio before he was 18; taught school in Kentucky two years; traveled through the South where he became interested in the welfare of the negro, an interest that in later years took the form of generous help given to negro schools in the South; graduated from the Albany, N. Y., Law School, and at 21 began the practice of law in Chicago, where, in seven years he accumulated a fortune of $100,000, and then retired from a law practice worth $20,000 a year, to devote the rest of his life to following out his ideal of philanthropy — to work for God — a career to which he has been faithful for over forty years; became a Catholic in 1865, after full and careful inquiry, being received by Father Smarius, S.J.; has, since he became a member of it, been an ardent advocate and generous benefactor of the Church, to which he has, in a manner, dedicated his life. Aided the Sisters of the Good Shepherd to acquire their first piece of ground, a block on Hill Street, Chicago, and to erect each of the three buildings successively occupied by them, two of which were destroyed by fire; recently gave them $500; was librarian of the Young Men's Library in 1862–63; organized the Hibernian Bank, Chicago, in 1866; visited Europe several times, and was in Rome during the session of the Vatican Council in 1871. Established a ranch for a brother at Walnut, Kan., 1869; now owns land in seven counties in Kansas; purchased (1872) 340 acres of forest and farm land at Libertyville, Lake County, Ill., which he named Forestspringfarm, and there he has spent many summers; gave a strip of 20 acres of this land to the Sisters of Mercy, who erected thereon, with his aid, a boarding school for girls, and a Chapel in which Mr. C. hears Mass; in October, 1908, he gave 240 acres of Forestspringfarm, valued at $75,000, to the Christian Brothers for a summer home. Among his benefactions may be mentioned: $1000 to the Catholic Church at Pittsburg, Kan.; $250 to the Church at Libertyville, Ill.; $1000 to the Apostolic Mission House, Washington, D. C., of which he is a founder; $1000 to the Catholic Church Extension Society, of which he is a life member; $1200 to the Josephite Order; $500 to the Working Boys Home, Chicago; financial help to the Cathedral and School at Tucson, Ariz., and at Santa Fé, New Mexico; to the Church at Walnut, Kan.; Jesuit Mission at Oswego Mission, Kansas; Negro Catechists' College at Montgomery, Ala.; school for education of Negroes in Savannah, Ga. Has contributed liberally to the Visitation and Aid Society, Chicago, since 1889. In recent years Mr. Copeland has been an earnest promoter by tongue, pen and purse, of Prohibition, and has contributed articles and written tracts for the movement, making this and the uplifting of the Negro the crowning and dearest work of his life. Author of some biographical sketches and tracts entitled Why I became a Catholic, What is Religion, The Church Builder, and of two prose poems upon his home called My Forest in Summer and in Winter, and To a Fallen Oak; also Coming to Kansas in 1869 (Pittsburg, Kansas, Smelter, 1895). CRAWFORD, Francis Marion:

Novelist; b. 1854, in Tuscany; s. of Thomas Crawford the sculptor; ed. St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H.; Trinity College, Cambridge, and at the Roman University. Spent four years in the East as a journalist, and edited The Indian Herald at Allahabad, 1879–80, during which time he is said to have conceived the plot for his famous novel, Mr. Isaacs, first published in 1882. More than thirty novels followed this first one, showing Mr. Crawford as a wonderful student of men and women (and their environment), in different countries and of different races. Whether in America, as in The Three Fates; in England, as in The Tale of a Lonely Parish; in Germany, as in Greifenstein, or in his numerous Roman sketches, Mr. Crawford was equally at home. There was not a shade of the Italian character, north or south, that was not faithfully reproduced by him. In Ave Roma Immortalis and Salve Venezia we have a lasting picture, almost a classic, of historic Rome, and the Queen City, Venice. Received into the Catholic Church in 1894, Mr. Crawford never failed to show by voice and pen, his profound admiration for the late Pontiff, Leo XIII. On being asked shortly before his untimely death in April, 1909, to write the story of his conversion for Some Roads to Rome in America, he, after some hesitation declined, while expressing to the Editor his deeply abiding conviction of the truth and claims of the Catholic Church.

CURRY, George:

Ex-Governor of New Mexico; of the Island of Samar, and of the provinces of Isabella and Ambos Camarines in the Philippines. B. at Bayou Sara, La., on April 3, 1863; removed to Dodge City, Iowa, in 1875, and four years later went to Lincoln County, New Mexico, where he secured employment on a sheep ranch; was next a post-trader at Fort Stanton in Lincoln County, going from there to Trinidad, Col., thence to Raton, returning to Lincoln County in 1885, when he entered the employment of James J. Dolan, wholesale and retail merchant, and became manager of the business; deputy county treasurer of Lincoln County until 1888, when he was elected County Clerk; served successively as assessor, sheriff, member of the territorial Senate from the Ninth district, composed of the counties in southeastern New Mexico at that time; held the position of clerk of the U. S. District Court of his district; president of the Senate (1895), and reelected to the Senate in 1896, serving as chairman on its finance committee; served on the staffs of Governors Ross and Thornton. In April, 1898, at the beginning of the Spanish-American War, Mr. Curry was appointed by Governor M. A. Otero as first lieutenant of the Rough Riders, and shortly afterwards was promoted to captain. Upon returning from the war in 1898, he engaged in the real estate business at Tularosa, New Mexico, and upon the creation of Otero County in March, 1899, was appointed sheriff of the new county; resigned in August of that year to become lieutenant in the Eleventh Volunteer Cavalry. Commanded the advance guard at the battle of San Mateo, where General Lawton was killed. Was quartermaster of the advance guard in the general advance of the American troops south of Manila; stationed at Naic, Cavite upon return; appointed provost marshal and provost judge of that district; in June, 1900, was promoted and assigned to the command of Troop K, Eleventh Cavalry, in which command he continued until the regiment was ordered home to be mustered out in 1901; ordered back to the Camarines, and served on staff of the district commander in charge of civil affairs until April, 1901, when he was appointed first civil governor of the Province of Ambos Camarines; on June 30, 1901, was honorably mustered out of the service as U. S. officer, and appointed as governor of the same province by Governor General Taft, afterwards resigning this position for that of Chief of Police of the city of Manila, where he organized the first civil police force under the American government; served in this position until August, 1902, when he resigned to accept the management of the Camarines Mercantile Co. Owing to ill health he was compelled to return to the United States in July, 1903, but in the Spring of 1904 returned to the Philippines and was appointed governor of the Province of Isabella by Governor General Wright, resigning in April, 1905, to accept the appointment as Governor of Samar, which was at that time the most turbulent island in the Philippines, and which was then causing the American government the most trouble. In accepting the governorship of the Island of Samar, he was given a free hand by the Governor General and received the hearty co-operation of the military department in establishing law and order. This was finally accomplished to such an extent that at the expiration of two years civil government was established and the people allowed to elect their own officers. Mr. Curry resigned as Governor of Samar on June 20, 1907, to accept the appointment from President Roosevelt as Governor of New Mexico; inaugurated August 8, 1907; resigned as Governor of New Mexico in 1909; is now engaged in writing his reminiscences of the Philippines. DALY, Arnold (Peter Christopher Arnold Daly):

Actor; b. October 4, 1875, in Brooklyn, N. Y.; s. of Joseph J. and Mary Daly, natives of Ireland. The parents of George Bernard Shaw, the Irish playwright, in whose plays Mr. Daly achieved his most noteworthy successes, were their intimate friends. Mr. Daly was educated at the Academy of the Sacred Heart and St. Patrick's Academy, Brooklyn. His first theatrical engagement was as call boy at the old Lyceum Theater; his first part that of a butler in a play in which Fanny Rice was starring; played minor parts until he came into prominence through his impersonation of Chambers in Frank Mayo's production of Pudd'nhead Wilson. Prior to his taking up the Shaw plays, Mr. Daly achieved successes in Because She Loved Him So, The Bird in the Cage, Barbara Frietche, in which Julia Marlowe was the star; Self and Lady, Are You a Mason? When We Were Twenty-One, Lady Margaret, Hearts Aflame, Cynthia, The Girl from Dixie, and Secret Service. On December 9, 1903, he produced Shaw's Candida for a single matinée at the Princess Theater. The success of both play and actor was so marked that Mr. Daly and Winchell Smith formed a partnership to produce the play at the Berkeley Lyceum. There Candida ran for more than 150 nights. Mr. Daly followed it with the Shaw plays, The Man of Destiny, and How He Lied to Her Husband, the latter a travesty on Candida, written by Shaw expressly for Mr. Daly. The next Shaw production was You Never Can Tell, which had as long a run. Then came John Bull's Other Island. In the fall of 1907 Mr. Daly founded the Theater of Ideas at the Berkeley Lyceum, N. Y., playing three one-act plays there each night. This he abandoned, and in December, 1907, appeared in a revival of Candida. M. DE ROO, Rev. P.:

Member of the Archæological Club of the Land Van Waes and of the United States Catholic Historical Society; Honorary member of the American Catholic Historical Society of Philadelphia. Father De Roo is best known as the author of a two-volume work on the History of America Before Columbus, a work which he was led to undertake while engaged in other historical studies in the Vatican Archives. In his search for information concerning Pope Alexander VI, he occasionally met with unpublished records having to do with the religious history of America before the Spanish discovery, and was induced, in consequence, to begin the long series of labors which resulted in the publication of his history. Father De Roo began his missionary labors in Oregon nearly forty years ago, and, in the pursuit of his priestly duties, traveled much of the Northwest before the advent of railroads or any other roads worthy of mention. In September, 1908, he resigned the pastorate of St. Joseph's Church, Portland, owing to ill-health and advancing years, and is now retired from active pastoral work. He has accumulated a large amount of historical material which has not yet been prepared for publication. Address: Portland, Ore.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier who resigned his seat for Wright, having been elected also for Quebec E. at general election. Address: Aylmer, Quebec, Canada.

DEVLIN, James H., Jr.:

Attorney-at-law; b. July 21, 1877, in Dorchester (Boston), Mass.; comes from the same Nagle family (on his mother's side), as did Edmund Burke, and the famous Irish blind nun, Nan O'Nagle; ed. in the public schools of Milton and Dedham and afterward at Boston College (A.B., 1897); graduated from the Law School of Harvard University in 1900 (LL.B.); now engaged in the active practice of law in Boston, Mass. Has traveled in the United States, England and France; president of the Charitable Irish Society, the oldest Irish Society in the United States; in March, 1910, it was one hundred and seventy-three years old, and was established to extend to the Irish immigrant a welcome denied by the Puritans. This society keeps an agent at the docks who meets every in-coming steamer, and it may be said that there is no white slavery question in Boston so far as the immigrant Irish girl is concerned, no matter what her creed. It is not an exclusive Catholic society, in fact at the outset no Catholic was eligible to hold office, but its history and years and records of work done give it an honored position in the community. Mr. Devlin is also a member of the Catholic Alumni Sodality, an organization composed of college and university men of Boston and vicinity, and served as its secretary for two years; member of the American Irish Historical Society; Boston College Alumni, and of the Boston City Club, a club established on broad democratic lines for the general welfare of the city. Address: Barrister's Hall, Pemberton Square, Boston, Mass.

DOUGLAS, Robert Martin:

Jurist; b. January 28, 1849, in Douglas, Rockingham County, N. C.; s. of Stephen A. Douglas, Abraham Lincoln's successful rival for the Senatorship and unsuccessful rival for the Presidency; his mother was the daughter of Colonel Robert Martin, a wealthy and influential planter of North Carolina; converted to Catholicity in boyhood, through his step-mother, who was the beautiful Adèle Cutts. M., June 23, 1874, Jessie Madeline Dick, of North Carolina; ed. private schools, Loyola College and Georgetown University (A.B., 1867; A.M., 1870; LL.D., 1887), where he was Valedictorian and gold medalist of his class. Served as private secretary to the Governor of North Carolina and Colonel on the Staff, 1868; Secretary to President Grant, 1869–73; United States Marshal for North Carolina, 1873–83; Standing Master in Chancery, United States Circuit Court, 1888–96; Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of North Carolina, 1897–1905, being renominated by acclamation by the Republican State Convention, at the end of this term, but defeated; in 1906 nominated for State Corporation Commissioner, but again defeated, although running ahead of his ticket. Judge Douglas was the principal contributor to the building of St. Agnes, the first Catholic Church erected in Greensboro, N. C., and is now Trustee of the Apostolate Company, of Nazareth, N. C.; has been active as Attorney and Director in organizing several important business enterprises, and Chambers of Commerce. Prominent in politics almost from boyhood, he was invited, when only nineteen years of age, to canvass several of the northern states in behalf of General Grant, and although he declined this invitation on account of his youth, and official duties as private Secretary to the Governor, he made several speeches in his own state. He has always been active in promoting the extension of popular education, and the protection of individual rights against corporate aggression. During his term of office as a Justice of the Supreme Court, he was compelled to study the principles of law and of public policy, but aside from his Judicial Opinions, perhaps his most important public utterances were his address on Trade Combinations and Strikes delivered at Catholic Columbian Congress at Chicago Exposition in 1893, and his short address against granting alimony in divorces a vinculo delivered before the Universal Congress of Jurists and Lawyers at the St. Louis Exposition (1905), to which he was a Judicial Delegate. He has also written and delivered several addresses upon historical, industrial, and economic questions; is a contributor to the Catholic Encyclopedia. Member of the American Bar Association. DRISCOLL, Michael:

B. April 18, 1844, in Brookline, Mass.; member of one of the oldest and best-known families in that suburb. His father, James Driscoll, was a prominent contractor, and the family was directly associated with the growth of Brookline, several of the sons engaging in the same business as the father. Michael Driscoll attended the local schools and graduated from the high school in 1861; from then till 1867 was engaged in mercantile pursuits in Boston, later entering the contracting business with his father, in which he continued until his appointment as Superintendent of Streets, April 10, 1876. He greatly improved and advanced the efficiency of the street department, making it one of the best in Massachusetts. Prior to this was chosen (March 26, 1874) a member of the School Committee, and the excellent reputation which the schools have for years enjoyed, as regards both educational facilities and buildings, is largely due to his interest and executive ability. In 1873, Mr. Driscoll married Miss Shea, of Brookline; she died. In 1877 he wedded Miss O'Hearn; she also is dead. Member Knights of Columbus; Massachusetts

Catholic Order of Foresters, of which he is a charter member and was first Chief Ranger; and the Catholic Union of Boston. DRURY, Rev. Edwin:

Priest, missionary, author; b. June 16, 1845, near Knottsville, Ky. His ancestors were among the Catholic settlers of Maryland in the Seventeenth Century. Some of them may have reached Maryland on the Ark and the Dove. His father, Hilary Drury, was born in Maryland, 1799, and came to Kentucky in 1808. His mother, Teresa Coomes, was born in Kentucky, 1807. His maternal grandfather, Francis Coomes, after leaving Maryland, tarried several years in Virginia and North Carolina, and came to Kentucky with all his family about 1795. It is interesting to note how fruitful the grace of religious vocations has been in this family. Rev. John Wathen, Rev. Charles I. Coomes, and Rev. A. A. Aud, were grandsons of Francis Coomes, and Archbishop Montgomery of San Francisco was but one degree farther removed in direct line of descent. The family is still represented among the priests of Kentucky by Rev. Edwin Drury, Rev. Louis H. Spalding, Rev. Celestine Brey and Rev. Lucien Clements.

It would be a long list to name the representatives of the family who have entered Religious Orders, especially the Sisterhoods. Ed. elementary school of his native parish, St. Lawrence; St. Mary's College, Marion County, Ky.; St. Thomas Seminary, Bardstown, Ky.; ordained a priest, June 21, 1872, for the diocese of Louisville; assigned at once to parochial work; for twelve years in charge of large rural parishes; later took charge of an extensive territory in which there were but few Catholics, and began mission work among non-Catholics; relinquished all local charge in 1894 and as Diocesan Missionary for ten years devoted his energies especially to his missionary work among non-Catholics; participated in the First and Second Missionary Conferences held under the auspices of the Catholic Missionary Union; became chaplain (1906), at the Mother-house of the Sisters of Loretto at the Foot of the Cross, which position he still holds. Father Drury has long been an occasional contributor to Catholic publications, and for several years has conducted the Question Box page in The Christian Family and Men and Women. The most important product of his pen is a book that has been highly praised, especially by those who are interested in missionary work. It is entitled What the Church Teaches; An Answer to Earnest Inquirers (Benziger Bros., New York). Address: Nerinx, Ky.

FEALEY, Miss Maude (Mrs. Louis E. Sherwin):

Actress; b. March 4, 1886, in Memphis, Tenn. Her mother, Margaret Fealey, was on the stage for eighteen years, and now conducts the Tabor School of Acting at Denver, Colo. Miss Fealey first appeared on the stage at the age of 4 in the tableau of Faust and Marguerite, her mother playing Marguerite. As a pupil of her mother's school Miss Fealey appeared in public as Vera in Moths; Juliet in Romeo and Juliet; Galatea in Pygmalion and Galatea; Louise in The Two Orphans; in Sweet Lavender; and as Kathleen in Mavourneen. She was 14 years old when Augustin Daly saw her play Juliet, and was so impressed that he engaged her for five years. Mr. Daly's death canceled this contract, and Miss Fealey was engaged for Eunice in Quo Vadis, by F. C. Whitney, under whose direction she made her first appearance in New York. This led to her engagement as leading woman by William Gillette. Miss Fealey, who at that time was 16 years old, remained with Mr. Gillette for two seasons, playing in this country and in England the role of Alice Faulkner in Sherlock Holmes. Her work in England attracted E. S. Willard, with whom she played Lucy in The Professor's Love Story; Mary in The Middleman; Ada in David Garrick; and Filaberta in The Cardinal. Following this engagement Miss Fealey supported Orrin Johnson as a co-star in Hearts Courageous at the Broadway Theatre. She also played Felicite in Mrs. Francis Hodgson Burnett's play, That Man and I. The most important engagement of her career was that of leading woman with Sir Henry Irving, she playing Ellen Terry's roles of Rosamonde in Becket; Julie in The Lyons Mail; Norah in Waterloo; and Marie in Louis XI. In the season of 1907, Miss Fealey starred as Ernestine in Martha Morton's The Truth Tellers, but ended as leading woman with William Collier in On the Quiet. Miss Fealey has starred at Elitch's Garden in Denver every summer for many years, during which time she has appeared in A Royal Family; Prince and the Pauper; Dorothy Vernon; Little Lord Fauntleroy; Mice and Men; The Little Minister; When Knighthood Was in Flower; Romeo and Juliet; The Christian; Faust; and Lady Dainty. In September, 1906, Miss Fealey signed with John Cort for five years, making her first appearance as a star in the title role of Martha Morton's latest comedy, The Illusion of Beatrice. The season of 1907–08 she starred in The Stronger Sex, by John Valentine. Miss Fealey was married to Louis E. Sherwin, a young Englishman, dramatic critic of the Denver Republican, July 15, 1907. Her home is at 826 East Colfax St., Denver, Colo.

GAYNOR, Hon. William J.:

Jurist; Mayor of New York; b. 1851, at Whitestone, N. Y.; received his early education at the Assumption Academy, Utica, N. Y., and through the influence of Brother Justin, Superior of the academy, was induced to enter the order of the Christian Brothers; went to Boston, taught for one year, then left the Order; returned home and entered the Whitestone Seminary. After a course of study there he entered the office of Judge Ward Hunt, at Utica, N. Y., to study law; admitted to the bar (1875); elected Justice, Supreme Court of New York, 1893; re-elected, 1907; fought corruption in high and low places, and although always a Democrat, declared himself a bitter foe of the ring power in that party; secured the conviction for election frauds, of McKane, a notorious and powerful boss; Mayor of New York, January, 1910. In August, 1910, an unsuccessful attempt on the life of Mayor Gaynor called forth from men of all classes, irrespective of party, a magnificent tribute to his stainless integrity, honor, and freedom from political corruption. William Travers Jerome, always a scathing critic, says that he had opposed the election of Mr. Gaynor, but he now thought him one of the best mayors, if not the best, the city has ever had. The Philadelphia Record (Democratic) says that he has been teaching mayors all over the country what can be done to break rings, to oust rascals, and to secure efficiency and some degree of economy in the public service. Some of the reforms of the Gaynor administration, accomplished in less than a year, have been: Removal of the aqueduct board and order to the new board to wind up the business, saving in commissioners' and engineers' salaries annually $200,000. One hundred and twenty engineers, foremen, and laborers dismissed from the water department, saving annually $185,000. Twenty heads of bureaus and laborers dismissed in the office of the borough president of Manhattan, saving annually $80,000. Bureaus reorganized in the Bronx and 85 employees dismissed, saving annually $130,000. One hundred and fifty foremen and laborers dismissed in Bronx Park department, saving annually $110,000. Thirty drivers, stablemen, and men with no fixed duty, dismissed from fire department, and changes in details and accounting divisions, saving annually $100,000. Sixty-five men dismissed from the sewer department, saving annually $70,000. Controller Prendergast has dismissed 30 high-salaried men and clerks, saving annually $60,000. Twenty persons dismissed from the department of buildings and offices, saving annually $20,000. In the highway department 494 men were laid off for the winter months, saving $100,000. By the reorganization of the bureau of street openings and the abolishment of an antiquated system the city will save annually an amount it is impossible to estimate, but which the Mayor says is millions. Address: 20 Eighth Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., and St. James, L. I., New York.

GERAGHTY, Very Rev. Martin J., D.D., O.S.A.:

Prior Provincial of the Augustinian Order in the U. S. of North America; b. November 11, 1867, in Carthage, N. Y.; received preparatory training in the public schools of his native town; finished his classical studies at Villanova College; entered the Augustinian Novitiate in 1885; ordained to the priesthood by Archbishop Ryan, in the Cathedral at Philadelphia, May 31, 1890. At the Chapter, in July, 1894, Father Geraghty was chosen Master of Novices and sub-prior of the Monastery at Villanova, the motherhouse of the Order in America; appointed, 1896, rector of the Augustinian Mission Band; re-elected in 1898. In 1902, he was elected Prior Provincial of his Order in the United States. During his first term he founded St. Rita's Hall, known as the School of Educandi, devoted to the training of young men who aspire to become Augustinians. This work has prospered under his fostering care, and in June, 1906, the Capitular Fathers testified their entire satisfaction with Father Geraghty's régime, by unanimously re-electing him Provincial for another term of four years; at the Chapter held in June, 1910, he was unanimously re-elected for a third term, the first instance of such an occurrence in the history of the Order in the United States. On December 23, 1906, he received from Rome the degree of Master of Sacred Theology, commonly known as Doctor of Divinity. Besides founding St. Rita's Hall at Villanova, Dr. Geraghty opened the new College of St. Rita in Chicago; the new parish of Saint Nicholas of Tolentine, in the Bronx, New York City; and Saint Rita's Church, South Broad St., Philadelphia. Address: College of St. Thomas of Villanova, Villanova, Pennsylvania.

GERLACH, George N.:

Superintendent of School Buildings, St. Paul, Minn.; b. July 3, 1857, in St. Paul; s. of George and Mary (Fuchs) Gerlach; ed. in Assumption Parochial School; entered business life at the age of 13, in a printing office; later learned the carpenter trade. Engaged in contracting business in 1880, and three years later formed a partnership with his father, which continued until the latter's death in 1887, after which he conducted the business alone until 1895, when, without seeking the position, he was appointed Superintendent of School Buildings. In 1904 the people of his district persuaded him to become a candidate for the legislature, and he was elected; m., October 12, 1880, to Magdalena Ackermann. Active in church societies; President of the German Catholic Aid Association since 1897; member of St. Joseph's German Catholic Orphan Society since 1878, and lay president of the society since 1890. GERRER, Rev. R. Gregory, O.S.B.:

Artist; b. July 23, 1867, in Lautenbach, Elsass, Germany; came to America four years later with his parents, who settled first near St. Joseph, Mo., and then at Bedford, Iowa. Entered the Benedictine Monastery of the Sacred Heart, Oklahoma, in 1890; ordained to the priesthood in St. Mary's Abbey, Buckfast, England. Gifted with a talent for painting, his art was cultivated, first in America, and later his superiors sent him abroad. He studied mostly in Rome, under Professor Guiseppe Gonnella, Ciro Galliazzi, and S. Nobili of the Vatican, making a special study of the Old Masters and sketching from nature; leaving Italy, he traveled through France, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Greece, Syria, Palestine, and Egypt. After completing his studies, and before returning to the United States, he was accorded the rare privilege of painting His Holiness Pope Pius X. The portrait was received with much favor at the Vatican and by the art critics at Rome, and the Holy Father was pleased to greet Father Gerrer as his priest artist. A duplicate of this painting was made for the Vatican (until that time the only one that had been accepted). In 1908, Father Gerrer made a nine months' trip through the West Indies, Bahama Islands, and Florida, where he sketched the scenery and fruits of the tropics. It is his ambition to paint religious subjects, though up to the present time he has confined himself to portraits. Some of his paintings that may be seen in Chicago are portraits of Dr. J. B. Murphy, Dr. Edwards, and S. C. Scotten; also Judge Clinton Irwin at Elgin, Ill. Address: Sacred Heart Mission, Oklahoma.

HARSON, M. Joseph:

Merchant; b. in New York City; m. Marianna F. Kelly, graduate of Sacred Heart Academy, Elmhurst, R. I. Ed. at Brown University, Providence, R. I. (A. B. in 1884). A prominent merchant in Providence, R. I., for many years; since 1908 engaged in real estate business in New York City. Has taken an active part at conventions of the Catholic Young Men's National Union for a number of years; inaugurated the literary feature at Catholic conventions by delivering the first prepared address ever read, at the convention in Brooklyn, 1883; a suggestion in the essay led to the establishment of Communion Sunday (annually observed on the Sunday within the octave of the feast of the Immaculate Conception) which received the approval of the Third Plenary Council at Baltimore in 1884, and later was indulgenced by Pope Leo XIII. Organized in 1885 the movement to erect a monument to Orestes A. Brownson, writer and philosopher, and after years of work has won success; the monument was dedicated in New York City on October 12, 1910; was one of the organizers of the Catholic Congress held at Baltimore, Md., November 11th and 12th, 1889, and drew up plan under which it was conducted; elected to membership on the committee to arrange for future congresses, and on its organization was elected Secretary; organized the Phi Kappa College Fraternity at Brown University in 1896, to be composed of Catholic students with the purpose of bringing together Catholic college men and to aim to establish chapters in all higher institutions of learning at which Catholic men attend. Prepared The Juvenile Court Law, which was first enacted in Rhode Island in 1897, and secured its adoption by the Legislature. An authority on the so-called Torrens System of Land Titles, and it was by his presentation of the subject in 1906 and 1907, by public addresses and written articles, that the New York Board of Real Estate Brokers was led to take it up, resulting in the enactment of the Land Title Registration Law, which went into effect February 1, 1909. In 1908 and 1909 was invited by the Public Lecture Bureau of the Board of Education to deliver a series of lectures on Land Title Registration. Several articles contributed by him to The Boston Pilot in 1890 on The Negro Problem, attracted attention; they suggested the organization of a society of Catholic laymen patterned after the St. Vincent de Paul Society, for the purpose of carrying on local work among the colored people and to maintain Industrial Schools for colored people in the South; the movement was strongly favored by John Boyle O'Reilly, whose sudden death a few months later deprived the proposed movement of a strong support. Contributed to Catholic press for past 30 years on matter particularly relating to young men's societies and the lay apostolate. Mr. Harson believes that as the most potent constructive influences in the past were, (1) the principle of obedience, and (2) the founding of religious communities; so, in the future, the potent constructive influences will be, (1) the principle of co-operation, more especially between priest and people, and (2) an intelligent development of social life in connection with all Church interests. Address: Times Building, Times Square, New York City.

March 2, 1866, in Epen-Wittem, Dutch Limburg; made his classical studies at the Episcopal College, Renaix, and at the Petit Séminaire, St. Trond, Belgium, and was prepared for the American missions at the College of the Immaculate Conception, Louvain. Ordained priest at the age of 22, left for America, September 15, 1888, and arrived at Boise City, Idaho, on the 19th of October, following; was assigned to take charge of St. John's pro-cathedral parish and of the missions in the counties of Ada, Owyhee, Boise, and Washington. In 1893 he journeyed to Europe to visit his parents, went to Italy, Egypt, and the Holy Land, and assisted at the Eucharistic Congress held in Jerusalem in May of the same year. In 1895 thrombosis and the gangrene which followed necessitated the amputation of the right lower limb and incapacitated him for missionary work. He was given a successor at the Cathedral, whilst two others took charge of the missions; he retained the chaplaincy of the Academy and of the Hospital of the Sisters of the Holy Cross, Boise, to which the Bishop added the post of diocesan chancellor. The duties connected with these positions being few, he improved his free time by corresponding for Belgian papers, for Reminiscences, of Baker City, and The Catholic Sentinel, of Portland, Ore. In 1899 he returned to Europe and was appointed to his present position. He continued his connection with the Far West by regular correspondence for The Catholic Sentinel until 1904, when he was given editorial charge and the management of The American College Bulletin. He wrote for it a biography of Mgr. Adrian J. Croquet, an Oregon Indian missionary and uncle of Cardinal D. J. Mercier, which was reprinted in the Records of the American Catholic Historical Society (Vol. XVI, 1905); and a history of the North American College of the Immaculate Conception, Louvain. HINCHCLIFFE, John:

State Senator, New Jersey; b. May 19, 1850, in New York; resident of Paterson, N. J., since he was a year old; educated in the public schools of that city, and at the King James Grammar School, Yorkshire, England, the birthplace of his father. Senator Hinchcliffe was a member of the Board of Education of Paterson for two years; Commissioner of Taxes and Assessments, four years; elected to the State Senate in 1891. Served as Mayor of Paterson, six and one-half years. Was Mayor during the fire and floods of 1902 and 1903; during the riots of 1902 he suspended the Chief of Police and took command himself, placed the city under martial law, and quickly restored order. He refused outside aid during the great fire of 1902, saying Paterson can take care of its own, and through his executive skill its financial credit was restored and the city rebuilt. Elected again to the State Senate in 1906, and has served continuously since. Is President of the Paterson Brewing and Malting Co., and also of the Empire State Granite Co. Address: Paterson, N. J.

HINGSTON, Lady Margaret Josephine:

D. of the Hon. D. A. Macdonald (Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec), of Glengarry; m. Sir William Hales Hingston, M.D., Canadian Senator and sometime Mayor of Montreal, who died, 1907. Of her four sons the eldest is a Jesuit, while the second, Donald, F.R.C.S.E., m. (1908) Lilian, daughter of P. A. Peterson, Chief Engineer of the Canadian and Pacific Railway.

HINES, Rev. Mother Mary Agnes:

B. in Avon, N. Y., of French and German ancestry; entered the Novitiate of the Sisters of St. Joseph, Rochester, N. Y. (established the previous year by the late Right Rev. Bernard J. McQuaid, D.D., first Bishop of the diocese), in 1869; made her perpetual vows on July 2, 1871. Manifested a remarkable gift for art, which, at the Bishop's instance, was broadly cultivated; also a notable business woman, and assistant superior at a very early age. She had large classes in painting, in oils and water colors, both in the community and its higher schools. Succeeded the late Mother Stanislaus Leary as General Superior in 1882. Mother Agnes co-operated most efficiently with her ecclesiastical superior in his great work for education: the enlargement of Nazareth Convent, the Mother House, and the Academy connected therewith, with its 275 pupils; the erection of Nazareth Normal School, the community's house of studies; of Nazareth Hall, a Preparatory School for boys under 12 years of age; St. Agnes' Conservatory of Music and Art; the Home for the Aged; and St. Joseph's Hospital in Elmira; a vast increase in the parochial schools testifying to her keen sense of the needs of the time, her breadth of mind in the matter of her Sisters' training, her religious zeal, and splendid business ability. All the schools of the Sisters of St. Joseph have been under the Board of Regents of the University of New York since 1878. Many of the teachers of this Institute in the diocese of Rochester have taken their final training in languages, music, art, or other special studies in the great European centers. The Sisters of this diocese have a flourishing school in Bridgeport, Conn., and have lately opened a mission in Oswego, diocese of Syracuse, N. Y. Address: Convent of Sisters of St. Joseph, Jay and Frank Sts., Rochester, N. Y.

HORGAN, Stephen Henry:

Editor, inventor, author, photographer; b. February 2, 1854, at Norfolk, Va.; his father was a native of Cork, Ireland, and his mother was born in Sligo, Ireland, though her ancestors came from the North of England; m. Mary Catherine Cecelia O'Connor, daughter of a convert. Ed. at the primary schools in Cork; grammar school in Nyack-on-the-Hudson; St. Francis Xavier's College, New York. In 1874 he won in a competition for an expert photographer on the New York Daily Graphic; here he remained until 1884, invented the process of photo-lithography which was used there from 1877 until the paper stopped; also invented, while on the Graphic, a method of half-tone illustrating which was used first on March 4, 1881, the first half-tone in the world to be used in a newspaper; resigned from the Graphic to introduce illustrations into the plate service of the American Press Association, where it is said he supplied 32,000 illustrations to 10,000 different papers, thus setting the style for newspaper illustration and also popularizing it; first art editor of the Recorder; art editor of the New York Herald, introducing half-tone engraving and color illustrating to that paper; after installing illustrations as a feature of the Herald he was dismissed by

Mr. Bennett. In 1881 he had invented a method of applying photography to etching and steel engraving; many etchings by Hubert Herkomer, F. S. Church, Robert Blum, and others, were made by his process, which he applied in his business; resumed newspaper illustrating on the New York Morning Journal; when John R. McLean of the Cincinnati Enquirer bought that paper he taught him the use of illustrations. About this time he invented a method of newspaper illustrating by the three-color process. In 1896 he went on the New York Tribune and there invented and patented a method of using half-tone cuts on the newspaper which forced other papers into it until that system of illustrating has gone around the world; is known as the Father of half-tone illustrating on the newspapers. In 1906 he started a paper in Newark, The Monitor, of which he was, for a time, managing editor. Mr. Horgan was granted five patents for his inventions connected with the printing press; one invention of his on which he did not seek a patent, is used in every illustrated paper in the world. Since 1895 he has been the editor of the department of Process Engraving for the Inland Printer of Chicago. He is an enthusiast on the power of the press, and has laid plans for a Catholic daily newspaper in New York. Assisted in raising $100,000 for charity in diocese of Newark. IRELAND, Most Rev. John, D.D.:

Archbishop of St. Paul; b. in Ireland 1838, and came to the United States in boyhood; studied for the priesthood in France, and was ordained in 1861. A man marked out by his talents from the beginning, he passed through some of the most arduous campaigning of the Civil War as Chaplain to the 5th Minnesota Regt. After a term of duty as Rector of the Cathedral, St. Paul, he was consecrated in 1875 Bishop-Coadjutor of that Diocese, and became its chief ruler in 1884. In 1888 his See was raised to Metropolitan rank, and in 1889 he secured the further development of the Hierarchy in the North West by the erection of the new suffragan Sees of Sioux Falls, St. Cloud, Winona, Duluth and Jamestown. A man of large views and an all-round lover of such freedom as American citizenship carries, the Archbishop stands in the United States for all the causes and ideals that elevate a nation. His Grace has always taken a firm stand as an advocate of total abstinence. His early training in France has given him a special insight into such controversies as arose when French formalism made its attack on the new phases of what was dubbed Americanism in apparent ignorance of the existence of an idealistic school of Catholic thought in all ages and among all peoples. A contributor to such periodicals as the North American Review upon questions of the day and the attitude of the Church toward them. Address: Portland Ave., St. Paul, Minn.

IRENE, Mother (Lucy M. T. Gill):

Educator; b. March, 1858, in Galway, Ireland; her father, Joshua Paul Gill, Secretary of the Galway branch of the Bank of Ireland, came to this country with his family in 1864. Mother Irene received her early education at old St. Catharine's Academy on East Houston Street, New York City, and later at St. Joseph's Academy, Waverly Place. In 1876 she entered the Ursuline Convent, East Morrisania, and in 1881 was transferred to the Ursuline Convent of St. Teresa, New York City, where she labored for twelve years as Teacher and Principal of the parish school. Of this school, more than one hundred of the teachers of the New York Public Schools are graduates. She was elected the Superior of the Community in 1893, and immediately established the Normal School at St. Teresa's Academy. When the Educational Authorities at Albany passed the law that only students of schools approved by the State Board would be granted license to teach in public schools, Mother Irene went to Albany, and through her own efforts had the curriculum of the Academy approved so that St. Teresa's was the first Catholic school in New York City empowered by the State Board to prepare for City licenses. In 1897 she opened an Academy at Park Avenue and Ninety-third Street, which now numbers more than two hundred students. The same year, the property known as Leland Castle, New Rochelle, was purchased by Mother Irene from Mr. Adrian Iselin, Jr. The present Ursuline Seminary was opened, which is now the Preparatory School of the College of New Rochelle. Mother Irene obtained a College Charter from the University of the State of New York in June, 1904. In September of that year she opened the College of New Rochelle, which has had a steady growth during the six years of its existence. In April, 1906, Mother Irene was elected delegate to the General Chapter of the Ursuline Order held in Rome, and in 1908 she was made Provincial of the Ursulines of the Northern Province of the United States. Address: College of New Rochelle, New Rochelle, N. Y.

JACKMAN, Miss Mary Martha:

B., 1808, of Presbyterian parents in Newburyport, Mass.; the family settled in Boston about 1818. Ed. Boylston School on Fort Hill. Permitted by her mother, Mrs. Mary Haslett Jackman, to visit any church in the city, Martha chanced one Sunday afternoon to stray into the old Cathedral on Franklin St., and from that time evinced such a fondness for Catholic services that when Good Friday came, she cried all day because her mother denied her permission to visit the Cathedral. The mother finally yielded in the evening, but decided to accompany her daughter to church, and as a result embraced the Catholic faith one year after the latter had been received into the Church. Prepared for her new faith by the Ursuline nuns, Miss Jackman was ever zealous in their service. When their new home in Charlestown was burned by the Knownothing mob, she ministered to the wants of the Sisters and worked hard seeking shelter and relief for the persecuted nuns; visited the tombs of the deceased sisters, after the conflagration, and even went so far as to varnish the coffins before putting them in their proper resting places. On March 29, 1910, Miss Jackman breathed her last, having attained the ripe age of 102 years. Her mind was active and her memory exceptionally retentive to the last. She was buried in old St. Augustine's Cemetery, South Boston, Mass.

Cockerill, having been attracted by some of Miss Jordan's articles published in western newspapers; remained with the N. Y. World ten years — one year as reporter, during which time she distinguished herself as an interviewer and writer, and handled a number of the World's biggest features; during the following nine years she was on the editorial staff of the World, and was assistant editor of the Sunday World for three years, associated with Arthur Brisbane, who was then editor. During this time Miss Jordan wrote her first book of Stories, Tales of the City Room, published by Charles Scribner's Sons. These tales, ten in number, were suggested by her various experiences as reporter and editor on the New York World. During the same period, she also made an exhaustive study of tenement conditions in New York and wrote of them under the caption, The Submerged Tenth. She subsequently studied sociological conditions in London and Paris, and wrote of them. On January 1, 1900, Miss Jordan resigned from the World to take charge of Harper's Bazar as editor, on the invitation of Colonel George Harvey, the new president of Harper and Brothers, and this position she still holds. During her ten years as editor of the Bazar, she has written four more books, Tales of the Cloister, a book of convent stories; Tales of Destiny, stories of men and women of the world; May Iverson — Her Book, a convent girl's experience in a great convent school, and Many Kingdoms, a volume made up of short stories by Miss Jordan originally published in Harper's Magazine, Scribner's, and The Century. She is also one of the authors of The Whole Family, which she wrote in collaboration with William Dean Howells, Henry James, Henry Van Dyke, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Alice Brown, and others. Miss Jordan has traveled extensively, having visited every country in Europe and Northern Africa. In 1902 she took a special course of study at the Sorbonne, in Paris. She is a member of the National Arts Club, N. Y., of the American Committee of One Hundred, and of the Notre Dame Alumnæ Association of the Northwest. In 1903 she received the Apostolic blessing of Pope Leo XIII, for her services in literature. Residence: 34 Gramercy Park, New York. Business address: Harper and Brothers, Franklin Square, New York.

KING, William A.:

B. January 24, 1857, at Waterloo, N. Y.; ed. primarily by the Sisters of St. Joseph, and spent four years at Niagara University, where he supported himself by working at the printing business in the office of the college paper, the Niagara Index. He left Niagara in 1875, to take a position in the typographical department of the Catholic Union and Times, presently becoming foreman in the composing room. In 1883 he purchased the Akron, N. Y., Breeze, which he conducted for two years. A vacancy occurring in the business management of the Buffalo Catholic Publication Co., (publishers of the Catholic Union and Times), in the fall of 1885, Mr. King was selected from some fifteen applicants, and has since filled that position. M. Sarah Cecelia Cotter, the artist and sculptor. Address: Catholic Union and Times, Buffalo, N. Y.

KING, Mrs. Sarah Cecelia (Cotter):

Sculptor, painter, poet. B. October 30, 1878, at Bantry, Ireland; ed. at St. Mary's Convent, Bantry; came from Ireland to her brother, Rev. James H. Cotter, LL.B., Ironton, Ohio, when 14 years old; attended St. Mary's of the Springs, Columbus, Ohio, and Cincinnati Academy of Fine Arts. Her first art work, The Listening Look, was followed by Ulysses, and A Neglected Old Man; a bust of Fr. Maloney of Cleveland; and a bust of Bishop Maes of Covington, Ky.; but the crown of her labors was reached in Christ the Rejected, exhibited at the Pan-American Exhibition, Buffalo, 1901, adapted from a life size figure of the Sacred Heart, which she made for St. Lawrence Church, in Ironton, Ohio. This head of Christ has won praise from St. Gaudens, Duveneck, French, Borglum, Lorado Taft, and Edgar Cameron. While in Italy, she was urged to leave the cast or even a photograph of Christ the Rejected with sculptors; Romanelli of Florence and Verdi of Rome especially commended it. The figure of St. John, placed in St. Lawrence Church, is another of her great works, while the busts of her brother, Rev. James Cotter, and her small son Billy are great triumphs of her art; likewise a Madonna and Child, for the Covington (Ky.) Cathedral. Two of her paintings, one an ideal portrait of herself, and McGinty, a genre sketch of an old Irishman, have been hung at the Society of Artists' exhibition. As a poet Mrs. King has also won recognition. She was married, July 22, 1902, to William A. King, Business Manager, Catholic Union and Times and Catholic Publication Co. Address: 147 Beard Ave., Buffalo, N. Y.

KLAPPROTH, Hugo:

Editor, author, poet; b. at Zellerfeld, Germany, August 29, 1848; entered the mining academy at Clausthal (after finishing his classical studies), but later turned to language and literature; came to the United States in July, 1875, and became a teacher in Virginia; accepted a position with a Protestant paper in Milwaukee in 1878 and continued in this capacity for five years. Reviewing Janssen's History of the German People for the purpose of refuting it, Protestantism began to appear to him in a new light, and by subsequent earnest study he found his way to the Mother Church, being received by the late Monsignor Batz, July 13, 1883. He had resigned his position as editor two weeks previously, and in December, 1883, he took charge of the management and editorship of Der Wanderer, St. Paul, Minn., which he made one of the leading Catholic weeklies of the country. Author of Briefe an einen protestantischen Freund, which gives the story of his conversion and the reasons for it (St. Paul, 1895); has also published a number of poems in different magazines and newspapers. Address: (temporary) Luzern, Switzerland, or, Care of Der Wanderer, St. Paul, Minnesota.

C.; served as deputy clerk of the Circuit Courts of Milwaukee County, 1906–08, and was elected State Senator of Wisconsin, on the Republican ticket, in the fall of 1908; member of Knights of Columbus, Polish National Alliance, and various church societies. Address: Milwaukee, Wis.

KLEIN, Abbé Félix:

French abbé and writer, famous because of his knowledge of the United States and sympathy with American institutions and ideals; b. July 12, 1862, at Château-Chinon (Nièvre); ed. first at the Petit Séminaire of Meaux, then at the Grand Séminaire de Saint-Sulpice, Paris, where he studied theology with Father J. B. Hogan (founder of St. John's Seminary, Boston); studied also at the Institut Catholique, and at the Sorbonne; went to Algiers in 1889–90, where he met Cardinal Lavigerie, whose life he related later in his book: Cardinal Lavigerie and his work in Africa. Taught philosophy at the Collège diocésain of Meaux for three years; published New Tendencies in Religion and in Literature, a series of essays showing his wide mind, his tolerance, together with his ardent faith in the united progress of democracy and religion. In 1893 he was appointed Professor of French literature at the Institut Catholique of Paris, the head of which was then Monseigneur d'Hulst. The new Professor soon acquired a great influence over the young Catholics and helped to make them accept the republican form of government; at the same time he followed the advice given by Pope Leo XIII to the French Catholics. This made him the object of enmity in certain quarters, so that when he had published translations of the most important speeches of Archbishop Ireland and a life of Father Hecker, the founder of the Paulists (L'Eglise et le Siècle; le P. Hecker), he was accused of Americanism. Immediately after Pope Leo XIII sent to the Archbishop of Baltimore an Apostolic Letter, Testem Benevolentiæ, in which he condemned the heresies known as Americanism, Abbé Klein wrote to the Pope that he withdrew his book. The ghost of Americanism disappeared as easily as it had appeared, and the Abbé Klein personally gained through this incident the sympathy of people on both sides of the Atlantic. He next wrote the very edifying life of the Bishop of Metz, Monsignor Dupont des Loges, in which there are pages on the Franco-German war that have great historical value; this work was given a prize by the Académie Française. A little later, Abbé Klein grouped in two volumes his articles in the great Catholic Review Le Correspondant; these are Autour du Dilettantisme and Quelques Motifs D'espérer. In Le Fait Religieux et la Manière de l'Observer, a pamphlet published in 1903, he shows what an apologist he might have been for the Church if circumstances had allowed it. His Discours de Mariage published in 1909 show his view of a Christian life and how it can be adapted to the different conditions of modern life and the immutable rules of the Gospel. For such a mind as the Abbé Klein, open to the latest and newest problems and necessities of mankind, America had always held especial attraction. A great traveler, the Abbé, looked to the United States as the newest, the largest and most progressive of all countries. He studied some of its highest and best ideas in the works of Bishop Spalding and in the sermons of Archbishop Ireland, and imparted his admiration to his countrymen by his translation of them, as Opportunité, and l'Education Supérieure des Femmes.

Wishing to study America on the spot, in 1904 he made a visit to United States and Canada, and saw New York, Boston, Montreal, Ottawa, Buffalo, Chicago, Peoria, St. Louis, Pittsburg, Philadelphia, and Baltimore, where he was the guest of Cardinal Gibbons. In Washington he called on President Roosevelt to whom he dedicated the relation of his journeys: Au Pays de la Vie Intense. This book was a great success in France; it was awarded a prize by the Académie and in three years had ten editions. The name of the author, until then only known to a small circle of religious and cultured people, became world-wide, and the Abbé Klein became an authority on American questions. This helped to teach tolerance to his countrymen as well as true democratic and republican principles; he made a social and legal study on Separation in the United States, a summary of the history, the laws and customs governing the relation of church and state in America. He also wrote a very curious book La Découverte du Vieux-Monde par un étudiant de Chicago, which under a transparent fiction is a comparison between his country and America, in which he freely says what he thinks of the ideas, the institutions and even the men of France. This book was translated into English, as also Au Pays de la Vie Intense (McClurg, Chicago), and was much appreciated in America. When it was known, in 1907, that he was coming back again, he was invited everywhere, and requested to give lectures in all parts of the country. He accepted the invitation to lecture at Lowell Institute, Boston, at the University of Chicago, and also at Chautauqua, Omaha, St. Paul, San Francisco, Flagstaff and New York. Some of these lectures were made in French and some in English. On his return to France he published an account of his impressions and remarks in the Correspondant and the Revue des Deux Mondes and then published the same in 1910 in one volume l'Amérique de Demain, for which he obtained a third award from the Académie Française. Both the French and the American papers agreed that few men had ever understood and explained so well the actual state of mind of the United States, and the fundamental questions confronting the democracy. The Paris newspaper Le Figaro summed up all that can be said of the Abbé Klein, that he was the Frenchman who knew best, and most loved, America. Address: Institut Catholique, Paris.

KNOTT, Hon. A. Leo:

Attorney-at-law (retired from active practice). B. in Frederick County, Md.; s. of Edward Knott, of Montgomery County, and Elizabeth (Sweeney) Knott, of St. Mary's County, Md. Related on both parents' sides to the Neales, the Mealeys, the Donnellys, the Digges, the Spaldings, and other prominent Catholic families of Maryland. His ancestors came to Maryland from Yorkshire, England, in 1647. Ed. at St. John's (Jesuit) College, Frederick, Md.; and at St. Mary's College (now St. Mary's Sulpician Seminary), Baltimore, Md.; graduated from the latter with high honors, and subsequently received therefrom the degree of A.M. Studied law under the Hon. William Schley, and on admission to the Bar formed a partnership with Mr. James H. Bevans, which continued for two years, since which time, until his practical retirement a year or two ago, he continued the practice of law in Baltimore, alone. In 1867 nominated by the Democratic party for States Attorney for Baltimore City, and elected; re-elected in 1871, and again in 1875, serving three successive terms in this important office. In 1859, Mr. Knott took a prominent part in the reform movement which resulted in the deliverance of the State of Maryland from the hands of the Know Nothing Party. Entering actively into politics in 1860, he was in close touch with the tremendous questions that finally launched our country into civil war. From the first he opposed secession; and battled fiercely against the hot heads of both factions. However, he remained steadfast in his allegiance to the Democratic party. In 1864 he was made Secretary of the Committee for the re-organization of the Democratic party, under the leadership of Gov. Thomas S. Platt, Judge Richard B. Carmichael, Col. John F. Dent, and others. The main object of this reorganization was to put the Democratic party in Maryland in full accord with the Democrats of the other states, as constituting the only safeguard of the liberties of the people, so seriously menaced by the revolutionary influences then in supreme control of the Republican faction. He was a delegate to the City (Baltimore), State (Maryland), and National Conventions. All in all, he was among the most prominent and most successful of the workers in Maryland, in bringing order out of the chaos that succeeded the Civil War. In 1866 he was elected a delegate to the Maryland Assembly, which included at that time the most notable men in Maryland. He was again sent to the Democratic National Convention in 1872, and was a member of the National Democratic Executive Committee from 1872 to 1876. Took a prominent part in the election of President Cleveland in 1884, and was appointed Second Assistant Postmaster General under Cleveland in 1885. In 1886 he concluded an agreement with the Governor General of Cuba for the transmission of mails between Cuba and Spain, and the same year was appointed to the Supreme Bench of Baltimore, but at the request of President Cleveland, declined the appointment. Upon retirement from public office (1889), Mr. Knott resumed tne practice of law. He is an orator of note; is an authority on Maryland History, and in this connection has recently contributed articles to the Catholic Encyclopedia. In 1873, married Regina M. Kernan, a descendant of the famous colonial family of that name. Member of the Society of the War of 1812. Clubs: Maryland; Country; University; Catholic. Address: 1029 St. Paul St., Baltimore, Md.

Father Bonaventura Hammer, O.F.M.); a Veni Creator; Salve Regina; O Salutaris Hostia; and a Tantum ergo. Address: St. Xavier's College, Louisville, Ky.

KOPMEIER, John Henry:

Merchant, capitalist, philanthropist. B. in Milwaukee, Wis., February 16, 1854; s. of John T. and Mary Adelaide (Allen) Kopmeier; ed. in parochial schools and the Spencerian College, Milwaukee, from which he graduated with honors; assisted his father in his business as ice dealer from early boyhood, and has the distinction of having, as a boy, saved nine men at different times from drowning, who had ventured too far out on the thin ice; at the age of twenty-four acquired an interest in the business, later securing entire control by buying out his father's partner; conducted the business alone for ten years, then took his brother J. G. Kopmeier into the firm, then known as Kopmeier Brothers. M. February 26, 1878, to Dorothy M. Germershausen. Through consolidation of several firms under one corporation, the Wisconsin Lakes Ice and Cartage Co., he is now its president; this company, during the hot summer months, gives away thousands of pounds of ice to deserving poor and sick people. Though in a position where he can practically control the price of ice in Milwaukee, Mr. Kopmeier has always maintained that it is a household necessity and should be sold as cheaply as possible, and has never permitted his company to take advantage of the situation, asking only such a price as will bring a fair return on the investment to the company. Is president of the Milwaukee Home Finding Ass'n for the rescue and care of delinquent children; member of the Milwaukee Tuberculosis Sanitarium Ass'n, for the cure and prevention of consumption. Founder of an Italian Mission in a district where all conditions pointed to its becoming a fertile school for crime; the Mission has proved a powerful influence for good. President of the Lindwurm Co.; a director in the Wisconsin Compressed Air House Cleaning Co.; and largely interested in the Twin Buttes Mining and Smelting Co. of Arizona. Former member of the common council and served as chairman of its committee of health. Actor; b. in Loudoun County, Va., in 1862; ed. at the College of Ottawa and Georgetown University, Washington, D. C. While studying law there he became president of the Lawrence Barrett Dramatic Ass'n, with which he appeared in many amateur performances. He obtained an introduction to Lawrence Barrett, and in 1883 made his first appearance on the professional stage in Mr. Barrett's company at the Star Theatre, New York, his role being that of one of Paolo's friends in a production of Francesca da Rimini. His most important part while with Mr. Barrett was that of Salarino in The Merchant of Venice. After playing in stock in Dayton, Ohio, with the Carrie Swain company, and in May Blossom, he joined Fanny Davenport's company in 1886, supporting her as Claudio in Much Ado About Nothing, and playing in Fedora and As You Like It. In 1887 Mr. Lackaye came into prominence by his portrayal of Robert Le Diable in the production of Allan Dare at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, New York, and attracted still more commendation the same year by his playing of Leo in William Gillette's version of She, at Niblo's Garden. His Gouroc in Paul Kauvar followed, and his success in this was repeated as Saviani with Rose Coghlan in Jocelyn at the Star Theatre, New York. In 1889 he played Don Stephano with Minnie Maddern in Featherbrain, at the Madison Square Theatre, New York. Haverhill in Shenandoah, and Gilchrist in Bootle's Baby, followed. He then made an engagement with Augustin Daly, and at Niblo's Garden he appeared as De Noirville in Roger La Honte, in 1899 with William Terriss and Jessie Millward, and in 1899 at Daly's Theatre as O'Donnel Don in The Great Unknown. After leaving Mr. Daly, he appeared as Sir Barton in My Jack, the Russian in Colonel Tom, Latour in The Dead Heart, Jack Adams in Money Mad, Barillas in The Pembertons, Jim Currie in The Cannuck, the title role in Dr. Bill, and W. A. Brady's production of Nero (1890–91), and Steve Carson in The Power of the Press; then went to London, and for a short time played with the St. James's Theatre company; returned to this country, and joined Charles Frohman's stock company, appearing in it in 1892 as King Louis in Pompadour, Perrin in Mr. Wilkinson's Widows and Jefferson Stockton in Aristocracy; engaged by A. M. Palmer for his stock company and enacted leading roles in Lady Windermere's Fan, The Dancing Girl, Saints and Sinners, Alabama, Jim the Penman, Woman's Revenge, The American Heiress, The Price of Silence, The Transgressor, New Blood, The New Woman, and The District Attorney. In 1895 he made one of the greatest successes of his career in the creation of Svengali in Trilby. In 1896 played the title role in Charles Klein's Dr. Belgraff, and in 1897 in Theodore Burt Sayre's Charles O'Malley; played Reb Shemuel in Israel Zangwill's Children of the Ghetto, in 1899, both in New York and London. Was the Petronius of Quo Vadis in 1900; played the leading man's role in Augustus Thomas's Colorado in 1901–02, and was in the cast of Amelia Bingham's production of A Modern Magdalen, in 1903. He made another marked success as Curtis Jadwin in W. A. Brady's production of The Pit, a dramatization of Frank Norris's novel, which ran from 1903 to 1906. The seasons of 1906–07 he starred as Jean Valjean in The Law and the Man, a dramatization of Victor Hugo's Les Miserables, and the season of 1907–08 in The Bondman. LARRAZOLO, Octaviano A.:

Attorney-at-law; b. in Allende, State of Chihuahua, Mexico, December 7, 1859. His grandfather, José Maria Larrazolo, was one of the wealthiest men of the state of Chihuahua, but in the various revolutions which convulsed the country and which finally culminated in the French intervention in 1862, the family fortune was wiped away and his family left in poverty. Mr. Larrazolo's father and four brothers served in the army of the republic during the French War. In 1870, the Rt. Rev. J. B. Salpointe, then Vicar Apostolic of Arizona (later Archbishop of Santa Fé, New Mexico), passed by Allende, and there happened to meet Mr. Larrazolo, then a boy 10 years old. Becoming interested in the lad, the Vicar secured the consent of the boy's parents and brought him to the United States. Here he remained under the protection of the good Bishop, and accompanied him on his travels in Arizona and New Mexico from 1870 to 1877. In 1875 and 1876 he attended St. Michael's College, Santa Fé, N. M.; in 1878 moved to San Elzeario, El Paso County, Texas, where in 1881 he married Rosalia Cobos. After the death of his wife he married in 1892 Maria, d. of Carlos Garcia. Both her father and grandfather, Capt. Gregorio Garcia, participated in the Indian wars in Texas. In the race war that occurred at San Elzeario in 1877, where many Americans lost their lives, Capt. Gregorio Garcia, with his sons and a few others, held the insurrectionists at bay, and saved the town from pillage until the arrival of the U. S. troops, who restored order and authority. From 1878 to 1884, Mr. Larrazolo taught school at San Elzeario, a Mexican community where only two of the natives spoke English; he brought the first school books that were ever used in El Paso County, and when he retired from his duties as school teacher to accept public office, there were over twenty well educated boys in the small community. In 1885 Mr. Larrazolo was appointed Clerk of the United States Courts at El Paso, Tex.; resigned in 1886 to become Clerk of the District Court of the 34th Judicial District of Texas, with principal office at El Paso; re-elected in 1888. In 1889 he was admitted to the bar and elected District Attorney for the 34th Judicial District; was re-elected in 1892. He moved to Las Vegas, N. M. in 1895, and has been practicing law there since. In 1900 and again in 1906, he was the Democratic nominee for delegate to Congress from New Mexico. Address: Las Vegas, San Miguel County, N. M.

LEWIS, Edmonia:

Sculptor; b. July 4, 1845, Albany, N. Y. Of mixed African and Indian blood, her father having been a negro and her mother an Indian of the Chippewa tribe in New York. Early left an orphan, she lived and roamed with her mother's people until she was fifteen, when, assisted by her brother, she went to the Oberlin, Ohio, college for three years. While there her Indian name of Wildfire was changed to that of Edmonia Lewis. From childhood she had always had wonderful power with her hands in shaping anything she touched, and while pursuing her studies, she began her career as a sculptor; came into notice as a rising young sculptor in 1865, through the exhibition of her first work, a bust of Robert Gould Shaw of Boston. The same year she began her artist career at Rome, where she has since resided. Her works, with but few exceptions, are the property of members of the British nobility. The late Marquis of Bute purchased her lovely Madonna and Child for an altar-piece. The Old Arrow-Maker and His Daughter is the property of Lady Ashburton. Probably her finest efforts in sculpture are Hiawatha's Wooing, and Hiawatha's Marriage, owned by Mrs. Laura Curtis Bullard, of New York. Other works include The Freed-woman, The Death of Cleopatra, and portrait busts of Lincoln, Sumner, and John Brown, in the library, San José, Cal. Address: Rome, Italy.

LILLY, Austin Jenkins:

Second son of Henry Joseph and Helen (Jenkins) Lilly; b. at Conewago, Pa., December 24, 1883; of a long line of distinguished Catholic ancestry; descendant on the paternal side of Samuel Lilly, First, born in England in 1699; educated for the ministry of the Established Church, but growing skeptical, was converted to Catholicity, and in consequence found it expedient to immigrate to America, which he did, after his marriage to Anna Price in 1730, finally settling in Conewago, Pa. His son, Thomas, born at sea on the voyage, was a member of the Provincial Council of Philadelphia, and cast his vote in favor of the Revolution. The Estate granted to Samuel the First, in 1730, is still in the possession of his descendants. He was one of those who built the noted chapel of The Sacred Heart at Conewago. Among his descendants were the Rev. Thomas Lilly, S.J. (deceased, 1862); Rev. Samuel Lilly, S.J., who died in Baltimore, Vice-President and Treasurer of Loyola College in 1854; Sister Mary Clare, at one time Mother Superior of the Frederick Academy of the Visitation; and Mother Johanna, at present Superior at the Carmelite Convent in Baltimore. The ground upon which the Jesuit Novitiate and Church at Frederick, Md., were built, was donated by a member of the Lilly family. On the maternal side, Mr. Lilly's ancestors came over to Maryland with Lord Baltimore, and from that time the descendants of the first Jenkins have been numbered among Maryland's distinguished sons, including soldiers, sailors, jurists, physicians, lawyers, and zealous priests. Among the clergy may be named Rev. T. Meredith Jenkins,

S.J., ordained in 1846, who died a martyr to yellow fever in South America; Most Rev. Martin John Spalding, who received the Pallium at the Baltimore Cathedral in March, 1865; and the Rev. Edward Jenkins, recently ordained. Members of this family were among the first pew holders in the Baltimore Cathedral, and of its present forty-nine Trustees, twelve are of the blood of the first Maryland Jenkins. Austin Jenkins Lilly was brought to Maryland when two years old; ed. at Calvert Hall College (Christian Brothers); took a special course at Loyola, the Jesuit College in Baltimore; received the degree of LL.B. from the University of Maryland in 1907; m. Helen Scott Browne, of Baltimore; Editor of the Chimes, 1905–08; Editor of the Catholic Mirror, 1906–08; Trustee of the Catholic Mirror, 1908 to date; Secretary of the Maryland Catholic Summer School in 1906 and 1907; admitted to the bar in Maryland in 1907, and at present is engaged in the practice of law as a member of the firm of Lilly & Haydon. LUMMIS, Miss Eliza O'Brien:

B. in New York; d. of William and Anne (O'Brien) Lummis; ed. at Academy of the Sacred Heart, New York. Was, with her mother and sister Florence, one of the earliest members of the Society of the Children of Mary, attached to the Sacred Heart Convent. Founder of the People's Eucharistic League (1896), which centered at the Cathedral, New York, and in a few years registered 15,000 adorers of the Blessed Sacrament; assisted in organizing the Corpus Christi Reunion for Men; introduced the custom of Nocturnal Adoration in local parishes during the Forty Hours and on Holy Thursday, which was approved by many ecclesiastical dignitaries; the favor of its erection as an American Arch-Confraternity (with seat at St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York) was granted by Pope Leo XIII; was instrumental in the installation of the Fathers of the Blessed Sacrament in the Church of St. Jean Baptiste, and in the establishment of the first public Throne of Exposition in New York. To these Fathers she relinquished the management of the People's Eucharistic League and The Sentinel of the Blessed Sacrament, a Eucharistic monthly, which she founded, edited and published, and which is a companion to Emanuel, the Organ of the Priests' Eucharistic League. Founder of the Society of Daughters of the Faith (Filiæ Fidei), which was honored by a personal Brief of approval by His Holiness Pius X; its first members were received by the Most Rev. Archbishop Farley in his private Chapel. The object of this society is to unite Catholic women, particularly the educated classes, in a more confident profession of faith, and by the showing forth of virtue in their own lives, to elevate the moral tone of society. It has already by conferences, religious and social gatherings, and literary propaganda, exerted a wide influence on public opinion throughout the country. Miss Lummis is the author of Daughters of the Faith (P. J. Kenedy & Co., New York); A Nineteenth Century Apostle (pub. by the Fathers of the Blessed Sacrament); a few poems and several magazine articles, and has in preparation a book dealing with moral questions of the day. MANNIX, Mrs. Mary E.:

Author; b. Mary E. Walsh in New York City, May 17, 1846; wife of John B. Mannix, a well-known and successful Catholic lawyer of San Diego, Cal. While still a child, her father, Mr. Michael Walsh, removed with his family to Cincinnati, Ohio. Mr. Walsh, who is now over ninety, is probably the only survivor of the old Catholic pioneers who did so much by their fervor, good example, and generosity, to establish the Church on the firm footing it holds in the City of his adoption. He is also the oldest living retired merchant of the place, all his former contemporaries having passed away. Mrs. Mannix was educated at the Convent of Notre Dame (de Namur), Reading, Ohio, where she was graduated. Her first printed productions in prose and verse appeared in the Catholic World. These were followed by contributions to other Catholic Magazines, notably the Ave Maria, for which she has written poetry, reviews, sketches, fiction, stories for children, and translations in prose and verse from the French, German, and Spanish. She is also a contributor to Benziger's Magazine, the Catholic World, and the Rosary. Author of: Life of Sister Louise, Superior of the Sisters of Notre Dame of Namur in Cincinnati, Ohio (Guardian Angel Press, Boston, Mass.); The Tales that Tim Told, A Life's Labyrinth, Chronicles of the Little Sisters, issued by the Ave Maria Press; also Pancho and Panchita; As true as Gold; The Children of Cupa; Cupa Revisited; The Haldeman Children; and the Pilgrim from Ireland, translated from the German of Rev. Maurus Carnot, O.S.B. She has also several books still in press. Although widely known as a writer of children's stories, this is by no means her representative work, the larger and more serious portion of which has been published anonymously. Address: 1804 Fourth St., San Diego, Cal.

McCARTHY, Hon. Dennis:

State Fiscal Supervisor, New York. S. of the late Dennis M. McCarthy, who was the third mayor of Syracuse, a member of Congress, a leading business man and philanthropist during his lifetime; for ten years a member of the State Senate, and while serving in that capacity secured from the State, by enactment, permission for priests to visit and say Mass for Catholics in the State Penal Institutions. Temporary President of the State Senate and acting Lieutenant Governor of the State when President Cleveland's removal to Washington elevated Hon. David B. Hill from the Lieutenant Governorship to the Governor's chair. Dennis McCarthy was born in Syracuse, N. Y., in 1854; ed. at Georgetown College and Cornell University; m. Mary Bache Irwin. It was in his grandfather's house that the first Mass in Onondaga County was said. Started in business as a member of the firm of McCarthy and Son, one of the largest wholesale and retail dry goods firms in Central New York; became the head of the firm upon the death of his father, continuing in charge until recently. Director of the First National Bank of Syracuse in 1877, and later a trustee of the Syracuse Savings Bank, both of which positions he holds to-day. President of St. Joseph's Hospital of Syracuse in 1896 and continued in that position until his appointment as a member of the Board of Charities on March 8, 1899, when he resigned, as, under the law, he could not continue to be an officer of an institution subject to the supervision of a Board of which he was a member; reappointed as a Commissioner of the State Board of Charities in 1907. Instrumental, in 1903, in securing the enactment of the law which provided for the extension of the Juvenile Court system and the probation of young offenders to the several cities of the State. In 1905 the late Governor Higgins appointed him a member of the Commission to inquire into and report upon the probation system, and one result of that Commission's work was the establishment of a State Probation Commission in 1906, of which he was appointed a member by the State Board of Charities and continued as such until his present appointment. Appointed in 1906, by the Board of Supervisors of Onondaga County, a member of the Committee on Soldiers and Sailors' Monument, when he became instrumental in securing the adoption of what is called the Syracuse System, whereby plans were selected and the work carried through under the immediate supervision of a special commission of expert sculptors and architects. President of the Syracuse Chamber of Commerce, 1906; the excellent work he accomplished during that year gave an impetus to the general business of the city which is still felt. His ability as a business man has received the highest endorsement from business associates in his own city, county, and elsewhere in the State. Appointed by Governor Hughes, on November 5, 1909, Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities, a position that has the approbation of the leading charitable organizations and philanthropists of the State. Address: Fiscal Supervisor, State Charities, Albany, N. Y.

MEAGHER, Rev. James Luke:

Priest, author; b. August 14, 1848, in the parish of Drangan, County Tipperary, Ireland; s. of John and Bridget (Connelly) Meagher; brought by his parents to America in 1850. According to the Historical Notices of the O'Meagher's of Ikerrin, by J. C. O'Meagher of the Irish Academy, the family, called in Irish Cinel Meachair (the Descendants of Meachair), are the children of Meachair the Son of Royal Blood, whom St. Patrick baptized; he was the grandson of Oliell Olum, king of the south of Ireland. The family reigned over a large principality till Cromwell conquered them, when he offered parts of their lands to those who became protestants. Nine embraced the new religion, the others held fast to the faith of their fathers, were banished and 64,000 acres of their property were divided among the officers of the English army, whose sons became the landlords of the south of Ireland. Numerous members of the family went to Europe, some became famous officers in the French armies, two were Majors General in Spain, and one served as prime minister of Austria. James L. Meagher first studied medicine, then taught a year in St. Mary's College, Montreal; afterwards studied five and one half years in Montreal College and the Grand Seminary at Montreal; ordained priest December 18, 1875. Assistant priest for six years, then served 14 years as pastor in the dioceses of Albany and Syracuse. In 1893, Cardinal Satolli, the Papal Delegate, asked him to establish a Catholic Publishing House similar to the Protestant Publishing Societies, and he founded the Christian Press Association composed of over 1,800 bishops and priests. The Association issues about 500 different books which travel all over the English speaking world. In 1897 Father Meagher deeded for $1,00 (for the use of the Association) property in New York City worth about $50,000. Besides writing for the New York Sun and other publications, he issued in 1882, Teaching Truth by Signs and Ceremonies, now in its 57th edition. This was followed by the Festal Year, of which 12 editions were sold. His Seven Gates — on the Sacraments — went through 9 editions. The Great Cathedrals passed its 7th edition; Man the Mirror of the Universe has 8 editions. Christ's Kingdom saw 4 editions sold, The Religions of the World went through 7 editions. Then followed from his pen: The Tragedy of Calvary, and How Christ Said the First Mass. Before writing the last two books, he visited the Orient and lived in Jerusalem, studying the historic ground. Later he brought out the Wonders of the Universe, giving thousands of proofs of God found in the discoveries of modern science. He has in press: The Masses the Apostles Said, and The Symbolism of Church Buildings, which will be followed by The Protestant Churches, their Founders and Teachings. Member of the Elks' Club of the Borough of Queens, N. Y. By order of Pope Leo XIII, on June 27, 1903, at the Basilica of St. John Lateran, Cardinal Satolli invested him with the title of Doctor of Divinity from the Holy See. MERCEDES (Gallagher, Mary Antonio):

A Sister of Mercy of the Diocese of Pittsburg; author and poet, known also under the pen name of the Rev. Richard W. Alexander. B. of non-Catholic parents, in Philadelphia, in the fifties. Descendant of the Hookey and Drexel families, who were among the early settlers in Eastern Pennsylvania; her paternal grandfather was mixed up in the unfortunate Hogan schism of Philadelphia, which drew so many from the Church. Her two sisters and brother were brought to the faith, together with her father, who died a happy death, fortified by the sacraments; only one member of her immediate family survives, Sister Hilda, who is also a member of the Order of Mercy, Pittsburg, Pa. Ed. at St. Joseph's Academy, Emmitsburg, Md., of which she is still an honored alumna; chosen to write one of the Centennial Poems, on the occasion of the 100th anniversary of the foundation of the Academy (1909). She was also a pupil of St. Xavier's Academy, Beatty, Pa.; received graduation honors at St. Xavier's, and her Diploma for literary merit from Boston College. Became a Sister of Mercy at the age of 18; elected Treasurer of the extensive Community of Pittsburg, and at the expiration of her term of office became teacher of the graduating class of St. Xavier's, Beatty, Pa., where she is at present. Author of four books, and more than twenty Plays for Girls, which have been used all over the world, especially in Convent Schools. Her books are: Wild Flowers From the Mountain-side, Poems and Plays, with introduction by Most Rev. P. J. Ryan, Archbishop of Philadelphia (four editions), pub. by Lippincott, Philadelphia; Mosaics, Poems; Mercy Manual; A Missionary's Note-Book (three editions), Catholic Standard and Times Pub. Company, Philadelphia. Contributor to Ave Maria, the Missionary, Catholic Standard and Times, and other periodicals; her articles have been copied all over the world. She visited Ireland, and toured the Continent in 1900, with the approbation of Superiors, and with letters from the Archbishop and Bishop, and many influential friends, in order to obtain subjects for the Order. Her present address is St. Xavier's Academy, Beatty, Pa., where she carries on her work as author and educator.

MERCEDES, Sister M. (Mollie Haynie):

MERRICK, Miss Mary Virginia:

B. in Washington, D. C.; d. of Richard T. Merrick, an eminent lawyer and orator of Washington; granddaughter of William Duhurst Merrick. Member of the Maryland State Legislature, and U. S. Senator for Maryland, 1838–45. Founded the Christ Child Society in Washington, 1891. When Miss Merrick was still a young girl, following out the beautiful French and German custom of clothing a child of poverty on Christmas Day, she prepared an infant's outfit and distributed gifts to the children of two poor homes. She interested others in the work and soon a little society was formed, each member agreeing to make six garments for the infants then being cared for, and besides, to make at least one child happy at Christmas. In 1900, the Society took more definite form; other work, such as sewing schools, children's libraries, Sunday-school classes, etc., were added to the work of relief of destitute children. The Society was finally incorporated, with a membership of about 600, including many titled ladies from all parts of the world, whose husbands or fathers were members of the diplomatic corps at the National Capital, likewise many who were connected with the Army and Navy and the official life of Washington. The object of the Society being one that appeals to every heart in which love of God's poor little ones holds sway, it is not surprising that it now has branches in New York City, Omaha, Neb., Worcester, Mass., Chicago, Ill., Ellicott City, Md., and Davenport, Iowa. Miss Merrick is the author of a Life of Christ (lectures for children), and translator of Mme. de Ségur's Life of Christ for children. Residence: The Decatur, 2131 Florida Ave., Washington, D. C.

METCALF, Rev. Theodore A.:

B. in Peoria, Ill., May 20, 1843, of Protestant parents; taken by them, in infancy, to Boston, Mass.; of English ancestry, settled in Massachusetts in 1634. One of his great-grandparents, Major General Uriah Tracy (a personal friend of George Washington), was a United States Senator from Connecticut, who died in Washington, D. C., in 1807, and was the third person buried in the Congressional Cemetery. His grandfather, Hon. Theron Metcalf, was for many years a judge of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts. Ed. at the Mayhew Grammar School and the Latin High School, Boston; St. Charles' College, Md., and the American College, Rome, Italy; gold medal scholar of his class in philosophy and second in honor in the class of Hebrew, at the Propaganda in 1865; graduated and ordained to the priesthood, May 22, 1869; the same year appointed one of the Stenographic Secretaries of the Vatican Council, and served officially during the sessions of that Œcumenical Synod. (Apart from His Eminence Cardinal Gibbons, the only living American bishop who took part in the Vatican Council, Father Metcalf is the only other living American who was officially connected with that great assembly). In March, 1870, Father Metcalf was appointed Vice Rector of the American College in Rome; returned to America in 1872; two years later, made Chancellor of the Archdiocese, and Secretary to the late revered Archbishop Williams, serving in that capacity for several years. Seven years Rector of the parish of Marblehead, Mass., and later of the Gate of Heaven parish, South Boston; during his incumbency in the latter parish, was instrumental in bringing about important reforms in the public schools of Boston, by having a certain text book and instructor removed, for teachings insulting to Catholics on the subject of Indulgences. Contributor of short articles, stories, verses, and letters to the Ave Maria, The Messenger of the Sacred Heart, The Catholic World, and also The Tablet of London. To the New York Freeman's Journal of June 3, 1871, he contributed an exhaustive historical letter on the words, Non videbis annos Petri and the Pontifical Jubilee of Pope Pius IX; this was afterwards embodied in a pamphlet issued by the ecclesiastical authorities of Baltimore, entitled The Grand Demonstration in Baltimore and Washington, D. C., in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the election of Pius IX to the chair of St. Peter (published by John Murphy & Co., and Catholic Publication Society, N. Y., 1871). This letter seems to have definitely put an end to the many controversies in current journals of the day, on the subject discussed. Father Metcalf has been an extensive traveler through Europe and Northern Africa. Received into the Catholic Church in childhood; found and studied a catechism and then asked to be baptized. The late Bishop Fitzpatrick of Boston was his godfather. Address: The Portner, Fifteenth and U Sts., Washington, D. C.

Musician; b. in Buffalo, N. Y., of Italian parents; studied music with Miss Cronyn, Buffalo; Santley, London. Ed. at Miss Nardin's Academy, Buffalo; sang in the Jesuit Church, New York, until the issue of the Papal restriction in regard to church choirs, since which time her alto voice has been heard in the concert halls of America, Berlin, London, and the principal towns of England, which she, with her sister Carmela, toured with Patti in 1907. An English newspaper said of them: The Signorina Carbone make music primarily for musicians. The quality of her voice was pronounced spiritual, rich and deep, her sister's soprano, pure lyric ecstasy. Max Bruch, German composer, has associated the names of the sisters with the music of religion, by composing for their voices a duet entitled The Cross, sung for the first time at Queen's Hall, London, 1907. In 1908, Miss Carbone married, in London, Everard Meynell, second son of Wilfrid and Alice (Thompson) Meynell; godson of Cardinal Manning; ed. at St. Charles College, London, England; and Slade School; artist and art critic, staff London Ill'd News; author of Giovanni Bellini in Great Artist series, and Life of Corot. MITCHELL, Hon. John M.:

B. in Plymouth, New Hampshire, July 6, 1849; s. of John and Honora (Doherty) Mitchell, who came to this country from Ireland in the spring of 1848, settling first in Boston, and later in New Hampshire. Ed. in the district schools and at Derby Academy, near Salem, N. H., where he continued his studies for one or two terms a year for several years, working at home upon his father's farm in summer and teaching in winter; elected superintendent of schools in the town of Salem when only nineteen years of age; entered upon the legal profession as a registered student with Edwards & Dickerman, a prominent firm of Derby; went to Littleton, N. H., September 6, 1870, and entered the office of Harry and George A. Bingham, long known as the leading law firm of northern New Hampshire; admitted to the bar March 1872, returning home, however, the first winter to teach and to conclude his term of service as superintendent of schools in Salem; taken into partnership by Harry Bingham (the firm of H. & G. A. Bingham being then dissolved), and this connection was continued until June 1881, when Mr. Mitchell removed to Concord, N. H., where he entered into partnership with Albert S. Batchellor and his brother William H. Mitchell, under the firm name of Bingham, Mitchells and Batchellor; became actively engaged in the important series of suits, all vigorously contested, which established the railroad policy of New Hampshire, so far as the courts were concerned. In all these cases Mr. Mitchell was of counsel for the plaintiffs, performing the hard legal work, making all the briefs, and arranging the important details of preparation for every issue involved. Senator Chandler, in referring to Mr. Mitchell's brief in the case of Burke against the railroad in the Concord Monitor of December 3, 1881, said that it was one of the ablest arguments ever written — systematic, logical, cogent. Acted as attorney for the Concord Railroad from 1884 till 1888, and for the Concord & Montreal, from 1891 till the lease of the same to the Boston & Maine, June 29, 1895, since when he has been counsel for the latter corporation. Known as a corporation lawyer. Mr. Mitchell is nevertheless a friend of organized labor in all its legitimate aims and aspirations; served as Counsel for the Granite Cutters'

Union; member of the Democratic State Committee; president of the state convention of his party, for the election of delegates to the national convention, in May, 1888; nominee of the Democrats in the state legislature for U. S. Senator, 1903; delegate-at-large from New Hampshire in the national Democratic convention at St. Louis in 1904; actively instrumental in the organization of the State Board of Charities and Correction, and was its first president in 1895; trustee of the New Hampshire Hospital for the Insane since 1900, elected in 1907 secretary of the board; trustee of the Margaret Pillsbury General Hospital in Concord; trustee of the Loan & Trust Savings Bank of Concord for many years, and president of the same, since 1905; director of the National State Capitol Bank since 1900; director of the Mount Washington Railway, and clerk of the Concord & Montreal; instrumental in the establishment of a Catholic Church in localities where there was no Church; legal adviser of the Bishop of Manchester since the creation of the diocese in 1883, and, for some time previous, of the Bishop of Portland, as to civil matters in the state. Has always been interested in the charitable and benevolent work of the state of New Hampshire, and drew and procured the passage of the act providing for the removal of dependent children from the vicious surroundings of county almshouses, as well as that creating the State Board of Charities, and defining its duties; was appointed by Governor McLane, a delegate from New Hampshire to the National Immigration Convention in New York, 1905. In 1886 received the honorary degree of A.M. from Dartmouth College; m. November 19, 1874, Julia C. Lonergan of St. Johnsbury, Vt. Office: Sanborn's Block, Concord, N. H. Residence: 57 Rumford St.

MONTGOMERY, John J.:

Inventor; b. February 14, 1858, at Yuba City, Cal.; s. of the late Hon. Zacharias Montgomery, of California, former Assistant Attorney General of the United States; ed. at St. Ignatius College, San Francisco, Cal. (B.S. 1879; M.S. 1880), and at Santa Clara College (Ph.D. 1901). Professor of Mathematics at Santa Clara College; devotes much of his time to scientific studies and inventions; claims to be the original inventor of the airship and disputes the pre-eminence of the Wright

Bros.; recognized as an authority in aëronautics, and by some German authorities as the father of aërial navigation. According to Victor Lougheed, author of Auto Vehicles of the Air, in 1893 Montgomery absolutely described the successful machine of to-day and was then prepared to do all that is being done to-day. Twenty-five years ago Montgomery made the first flight ever made in an aëroplane, and in 1885, a year later, he evolved the parabolic curved wing which is the sole support of all aëroplanes now in use. The Wright patent calls for a flat surface wing, but neither Wilbur Wright nor his brother Orville, nor any other person, has ever used a flat surface wing to support his machine in the air. The Wrights dispute this, and the case will be decided by the courts. Inventor of the rectifier, which is designed to recharge storage batteries without loss of electricity, recently sold to the San Francisco Gas & Electric Co., for $250,000. Has also done original work in typo-telegraphy, by which a message is sent and received type-written. Read a paper on Aviation at the Columbian Exposition in Chicago, 1893. Address: Santa Clara College, Santa Clara, Cal.

MULLALY, John:

Journalist, lecturer, inventor. B. in Belfast, Ireland. Honorary LL.D., St. John's University, Fordham, N. Y., and Lit. Doc. of the Christian Brothers' College, St. Louis, Mo. Entered journalism on the New York Tribune, under Horace Greeley; later City Reporter of the New York Evening Post, under the editorial management of William C. Bryant; six years on the New York Herald and its special correspondent on the expedition sent out to lay a submarine cable across the Gulf of St. Lawrence from Cape Ray, Newfoundland, to Cape North, Cape Breton; special correspondent during the first three Atlantic Telegraph Expeditions of 1857 and 1858, during which he was the guest of the Officers of the U. S. Steam Frigate Niagara. Three hundred and sixty-six dispatches of more or less importance, were sent through the Cable after its submersion, August 5, 1858, but in less than four weeks the electric connection ceased. The success of the enterprise was, however, assured; so that at present there are over two hundred and eighty thousand miles of submarine cables in operation throughout the world. During these expeditions, Mr. Mullaly also temporarily officiated as Secretary to Professor Morse, the Inventor of the Electro-magnetic Telegraph, and in the same capacity to Mr. Cyrus W. Field, the Manager of the Company; afterwards edited and published the Metropolitan Record, the official organ of Archbishop Hughes of New York; was Commissioner of Health one term, Member of the Board of Assessors two terms; Member of New York Press Club twenty years; U. S. Catholic Historical Society. Originator of the new system of Parks and Parkways north of the Harlem River; active participator and promoter in the seven years' movement by which four thousand acres were acquired by the City, which includes Van Cortland, Pelham Bay, Bronx, Crotona, Claremont and St. Mary's Parks, and Mosholu, Bronx and Pelham and Crotona Parkways; he fought for this movement during seven years of the most persistent opposition of every municipal administration, from the first introduction of the bill in the State Legislature, until the final decision in its favor by the Court of Appeals. He is the discoverer of the peculiar properties of Aluminum in their application to Lithography, or Surface Printing, and Inventor of Aluminography; is President of the U. S. Aluminum Printing Plate Co.; made an extensive investigation of the milk supply of the metropolis and found that more than one-half of the quantity sold in New York and Brooklyn consisted of adulterated and swill milk. His publication and exposure of the nefarious business resulted, after years of persistent agitation, in a marked reform of the trade. Author of The Laying of the Cable, or the Ocean Telegraph; A Trip to Newfoundland to Lay the Gulf of St. Lawrence Cable; The Milk Trade of New York, exposing its adulterations; More Public Parks, Lungs for the Metropolis; Report to the State Legislature of 1884; Biographical Sketch of Archbishop Hughes; Editor of the The Journal of the Fair, an illustrated daily paper of sixteen pages, issued from the new St. Patrick's Cathedral, and comprising over 250 large folio pages; — aggregate proceeds of the Fair held from October 23rd to November 29, 1878, amounted to $175,000; The Seminary, a monthly publication, illustrated, designed to aid the construction of the new St. Joseph's Seminary at Dunwoodie, N. Y., published from September, 1892 to September, 1896, and containing over 850 folio pages. Address: 223 East Forty-ninth St., New York City.

MURPHY, Mrs. Virginia (Reed):

Author; b. near Springfield, Mass. Whilst an infant, her father died in an epidemic of cholera, and James F. Reed nursed both Virginia and her mother through the same illness and finally married the mother. Hence the little girl knew no other father, and owing to Mr. Reed's great devotion, she always bore his name with pride and gratitude. In 1846, Mr. Reed and his family, with some friends, the Donners, started for California (then a province of Mexico) in prairie schooners. The party afterwards bore the name The Donner Party. Their history was one of disaster and horror, over 40 of the original 80 perishing in the winter snows of the Sierra Nevadas. Virginia was a child of 12 when the party started. While imprisoned in the snows of the mountains, she attended daily prayers offered by Patrick Breen, one of the emigrants, and there vowed that if she and her loved ones escaped she would become a Catholic. Rescue ultimately came, and her father and family settled in San José. In 1851 she married John Murphy, the founder of the celebrated mining camp of Murphy's. She wrote a graphic account of her trip across the plains, which appeared in The Century Magazine in 1890. Address: Second St., San José, California.

O'BRIEN, Rev. John:

Editor of the Sacred Heart Review; b. April 2, 1838, at Garranjames, parish of Imogeela, diocese of Cloyne, County Cork, Ireland. Came to America with his parents in 1850; settled in West Springfield, Mass.; employed on a farm, and later in a factory during the Know-Nothing days, when Catholics were rarely employed and the Church in New England was living in strenuous times. During these years of hard manual labor, which often began at 5:30 A. M., Father O'Brien gave all his spare time to study, and the defence of his religion. Seeing that the Catholic children around him were receiving little or no religious instruction, he obtained from the Superintendent of the Mill the use of a hall, where he gathered the children and young people every Sunday afternoon for Sunday school. Later acted as book-agent and canvasser for the Boston Pilot, when he read everything that came within his reach from Milner's End of Controversy and Pope and Maguire's Oral Controversy, to the Bible. About this time Father Powers, a priest, on a visit from Ireland, noticed his passionate love for books and for souls, and proposed his becoming a priest, an idea that finally took shape. He was sent to Miss Stebbins' school in Springfield, then to St. Charles' College, Ellicott City, Md., later making his theological studies at St. Joseph's Seminary, Troy, N. Y. Ordained June 6, 1868; pastor at Concord and Lexington, 1871. East Cambridge, Mass., 1873; built Church of the Sacred Heart, East Cambridge, 1874; later built schools and convents. In December, 1888, Father O'Brien founded a small Catholic weekly, the Sacred Heart Review, mainly for the use of his Advanced Class in Christian Doctrine. From this small beginning there has grown a world-wide publication known and welcomed in every corner of the earth where Catholic interests are dominant. Under Father O'Brien's splendid editorship the Review has attained the highest rank; possessing some unique and salient features, it defends, propagates and explains all truths, and practices of the Church in relation to burning questions of the day. On June 6, 1908, Father O'Brien celebrated his triple anniversary, the 40th of his priesthood, the 35th as Pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart, East Cambridge, and the 20th as founder of the Sacred Heart Review, an event that brought an outpouring of congratulation and appreciation from every part of the country for the beloved Editor-priest. Address: The Sacred Heart Review, East Cambridge, Mass.

January 25, 1866, Ellen Josephine Costello, of County Kerry, Ireland, whose family retains its Spanish name, with little alteration, to this day. Dr. O'Connell was appointed Examiner in the Interior Department, Washington, D. C., 1866; has held the positions of Legal Examiner, Medical Examiner, and Special Examiner of Soldiers' pension claims, at intervals covering forty-four years. Was a reporter for Washington papers, principally the National Intelligencer; is a correspondent of the press, to which he has contributed much in the cause of American and Celtic literature; has been prominently identified with the movement to promote the cultivation of the Gaelic language, which he speaks and writes classically, and in which he has delivered many addresses. Has made a study of heraldry and genealogy; has collected over three hundred armorial bearings, crests, and heraldic devices, many of the latter, which were left blank in other works, he has translated from the Scotch, Welsh and Irish. He is the author of many poems, some of which are: America, I am thy Child; Sentinels of Our Heroic Dead; Fág aú Beallach; and The Memories of '98. Author of The Irish in the Revolution and the Civil War (C. J. Ziegler, Washington, D. C., 1895), afterwards enlarged to embrace the Spanish and Philippine Wars; and Every Walk of Life. Published The Gem Speaker, a handbook of conversations in English, French, German, Italian, Gaelic and Spanish, for the use of tourists abroad, with rules for the pronunciation of these languages, which was copyrighted March 15, 1905. His Irish in the Revolution was the origin of the American Irish Historical Society. During his service as Special Examiner of the Bureau of Pensions, covering a period of twenty years, he traveled thousands of miles a month, often in weird regions far removed from human habitation. Member of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. Address: Washington, D. C.

O'CONNELL, John Joseph:

Brig. General U. S. Army, only General of the name the American Army ever had, and the third of the name known to the world, one having been in France, the other in Austria, and both ancestors of the American. Original stock, the O'Connells of Derrynane Abbey. B. near Tralee, County Kerry, Ireland; s. of John and Mary (Carter) O'Connell; ed. by the Christian Brothers, Washington, D. C. Enlisted as a private during the American Civil War, and saw the end of the war in the surrender of Lee at Appomattox Court House; m. in 1870, Margaret Le Boutillier of Cincinnati, Ohio, of Norman ancestry. Commissioned, 1867, 2nd Lieutenant, and having successfully passed through the grades of 1st Lieutenant, Captain, Major, Lieutenant Colonel, and Colonel, was retired by law on account of age, December 16, 1904. The first thirty years of his service as an officer were spent in the oldest and one of the most renowned regiments of the line, the First U. S. Infantry; much on the plains, either fighting or hunting Indians. The last Indian war in which he participated was the Pine Ridge Sioux Campaign, fought during the winter of 1890, in Northern Nebraska. Captured Young Man Afraid of His Horses, Chief of the Ogalalla Sioux, and turned him over to General Miles, Commander of the troops, who used the Indian as a mediator between the United States and the hostiles, fortified in the Bad Lands of southern Dakota, whereby the latter surrendered without bloodshed. After this war he served for many years on the staff of several Governors of California, as U. S. Inspector of the National Guard of that Commonwealth. Captain O'Connell went to Cuba with his regiment in 1898, at the outbreak of the Spanish-American War; was the first American officer to land in Cuba in command of troops and the first to engage in battle with the Spaniards; landed at Point Arbolitus, about 30 miles from Havana, in command of two companies of Infantry. The landing was opposed by a regiment of Spaniards, who lost their Colonel, several officers, and many men. Captain O'Connell landed and accomplished his object without losing a man. On July 1, he commanded the 1st Infantry battalion, which supported Capron's Battery at the Battle of El Caney. General O'Connell served two terms in the Philippine Islands; in the Island of Samar, where he very materially helped in establishing schools and Civil Government; and in Manila, where he commanded his regiment at Santa Mesa, before it was ordered to station at Fort Crook, Neb., where he continued in command up to the time of his retirement from active service. General O'Connell is a distinguished linguist, speaking fluently French, Italian, Spanish, and German. Member of U. S. Infantry Ass'n; Loyal Legion (former vice-president); Grand Army of the Republic; and many other army societies. Club: Army and Navy (Washington). Address: The Ontario, Washington, D. C.

O'CONNELL, The Most Rev. William H., D.D.:

Fifth bishop and second Archbishop of Boston; b. in Lowell, Mass., December 8, 1859; studied at St. Charles College, Ellicott City, Md., 1876 to 1878; entered Boston College, and graduated in 1881. A scholarship in the American College at Rome was awarded him by the late Archbishop Williams; and he was ordained in Rome, on June 8, 1884; spent another year studying and then returned home; assigned as assistant at St. Joseph's Church, Medford, and two years later, at St. Joseph's in the west end, Boston, with Monsignor Byrne, vicar-general; in 1895 he was a lecturer at the Catholic Summer School. In 1896 he was chosen rector of the American College, Rome; created by the late Pope Leo XIII a domestic prelate with title of Monsignor, in 1897. During his administration, the number of students increased, the building was improved, and electric lights introduced. In April, 1901, Monsignor O'Connell was appointed Bishop of Portland, Me., and was consecrated by Cardinal Satolli, in the Lateran basilica, May 19, 1901; returned to the United States, and on July 4th was installed in the cathedral of Portland. He was the first graduate of Boston College to be raised to the episcopate, and in 1902 he addressed the then graduating class in Symphony Hall, Boston. In January, 1905, Bishop O'Connell was named assistant at the Pontifical throne, and later was made a member of the Roman Academy of Arcadi; sent as envoy to the Mikado of Japan by Pope Pius the Tenth (1905). This mission proved very successful; he was received with extraordinary honors, and had conferred on him by the emperor the First Class Grand Cordon of the Order of the Sacred Treasury. On his return Pope Pius made him coadjutor archbishop of Boston, with right of succession (February 8, 1906). On the death of Archbishop Williams on August 30, 1907, he became archbishop. Invested with the pallium in Holy Cross Cathedral, Boston, January 29, 1908. Same year gave $1000 to the Church Extension Society. O'DEA, Rt. Rev. Edward John, D.D.:

Bishop of Seattle; b. in Boston, Mass., November 23, 1856; attended a private school, previous to the departure of his mother and younger brother for California by the Isthmus of Panama. His father, Edward O'Dea, joined the rush of gold seekers and preceded by a year the rest of the family to the Pacific Coast; while in San Francisco, he attended St. Ignatius College. The family moved to Portland, Ore., in 1866, where they reside to this day. After a few years spent in the public schools, the future Bishop entered the school of the Sisters of the Holy Names, in Portland, and finished his classical course of six years in St. Michael's College; entered the Grand Seminary in Montreal, Can.; remained for six years; ordained priest, December 23, 1882, by Archbishop Fabre; assigned to duty at the Cathedral, Portland, Ore., where he served under the pioneer Archbishop Blanchet, and the martyred Archbishop Charles J. Seghers. Later appointed secretary to Archbishop William H. Gross, which position he filled for ten years, when he was appointed pastor of St. Patrick's Church in Portland. Consecrated third Bishop of Nisqually, in Vancouver, Wash., September 8, 1896; moved his residence from Vancouver to Seattle in March, 1903; erected St. James Cathedral, Seattle, which was dedicated on December 22, 1907. Established, May 31, 1850, the Diocese of Nisqually, so named from the ancient village, which now exists but in name, near the city of Olympia, but which in early days was the headquarters of the powerful Nisqually tribe of Indians, among whom the pioneer Catholic missionaries lived and labored for many years. The progress of the diocese during the administration of Bishop O'Dea may be estimated by the following facts: in 1896, when he took charge, it contained only 39 secular priests, 24 priests of religious orders, 41 churches with resident priests, 48 missions with churches, 4 colleges and academies for boys, 14 academies for young ladies, 5 orphan asylums, 11 hospitals, and a Catholic population of 42,000. In the year 1910, there were 81 secular priests, 62 priests of religious orders, 78 churches with resident priests, 102 missions with churches, 6 colleges and academies for boys, 19 academies for young ladies, 6 orphan asylums, 13 hospitals, and a Catholic population of 90,000. Realizing the importance that Seattle would soon assume as the great emporium of the northern Pacific Coast, the Bishop petitioned the Pope to transfer his residence officially to Seattle, and received a favorable reply on September 11, 1907, creating the Diocese of Seattle. Address: Seattle, Wash.

O'MEARA, Joseph:

Dramatic reader; b. November 1, 1876, at Cincinnati, Ohio; ed. at St. Xavier's College. Director of elocution and oratory, Cincinnati College of Music. Has been connected for 15 years with the leading dramatic companies of the United States. McKee Rankin says of him, that he is one of the very few young men upon the English-speaking stage who applies a thoughtful, studious knowledge to his work — who looks upon the actor's calling as an art, and it is an art that taxes the very finest intellect of man. The Cincinnati Enquirer, speaking of one of his readings, says: The intensely poetic lines of Manfred were given as fine an interpretation as could well be conceived, and held the audience spellbound. The climax of the program was the Hexenlied of Ernest Von Wildenbruch. In this number the reader rose to most intensely dramatic heights. His voice, a well modulated baritone, full of resonance and power, depicted the various shades of feeling in a masterly manner, which compelled the admiration and breathless interest of the audience. Address: 2263 Monroe Ave., Norwood, Ohio.

O'MEARA, Stephen:

Police-Commissioner of the City of Boston; b. in Charlottetown, Prince Edward Isle, 1854; graduated from the high school of Charlestown, Mass., and became a reporter for the Boston Globe; after remaining there some time, in December, 1874, he entered the employ of the Boston Journal, and became successively city editor, managing editor, and eventually editor and general manager. In 1896 he became part owner and director, as well as editor. Some years ago Mr. O'Meara sold out his interest in the paper, and became Police-Commissioner of the City of Boston, which position he now holds. In 1891, Dartmouth College conferred on him the degree of Master of Arts. Served for five years as treasurer of the New England Associated Press; five years trustee of the State Library; was first president of the Boston Press Club, continuing as such for three years. Is a member of the Catholic Union. M., in 1878, Miss Squire. Residence: 585 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

O'REILLY, Miss Gertrude Mary:

B. in Ireland. D. of James William O'Reilly, a lawyer and member of a family identified with Irish nationalism. A great uncle, Father Eugene O'Reilly, was one of the first promoters of the Irish revival, being the author of the Gaelic Dictionary, and a voluminous catalogue of the ancient manuscripts. An uncle, Eugene O'Reilly, was imprisoned, and exiled in the time of the Young Irelanders; having joined the Turkish army he won the Order of Merit, the Order of Valor, the Order of the Medejie and the title of Hassan Bey. Her mother, Susan MacDonnell, was the only daughter of Colonel Alexander MacDonnell of the Glens of Cushendall, County Antrim, a convert to the faith. Miss O'Reilly is a graduate of the Mesdames of the Sacred Heart, having been a pupil in their schools at Dublin, Dundrum, and Roehampton. Winner of a scholarship in the Royal Hibernian Academy, where she studied drawing and painting from the life and antique; studied decorative work and applied design in the Royal College of Art, South Kensington; has studied in London, Dublin, Cork, and Galway, and gained a studentship for design, diplomas for fourteen different art subjects, the Irish Drawing Teachers Diploma, several awards and prizes for leatherwork, design, and painting, as well as a special prize for studies from the ancient Irish manuscripts. This latter she obtained at the Oireacthais, the great Irish festival that is held in Dublin under the auspices of the Gaelic League. In 1900, the Dominican Fathers in Dublin founded a residence house for business girls in the city, and Miss O'Reilly became first superintendent. She oversaw the whole work from its inception and continued to manage its affairs for eighteen months, when her health broke down from over work. During that time she opened a branch house; originated the establishment of a summer home (which was afterwards realized); managed a large non-residential club in connection with the house, and edited a small magazine for girls called An Reult (the Star). In 1905, she took a cottage in Claddach, County Galway, where, with a friend, she endeavored to ameliorate the conditions of the fisherfolk and teach them more hygienic methods of living; while there acted as honorary Secretary for the Galway branch of the Irish Industrial Development Association; began to contribute to the American Press; came to this country in 1907, and has since then contributed articles, short stories and poems to most of the leading Catholic magazines, and to the daily press; a well-known lecturer on Irish subjects, especially Irish art and folk-lore. PATTERSON, Rt. Rev. Monsignor George J.:

B. in the Fort Hill district of Boston, Mass., November 30, 1851; s. of John and Margaret Patterson; ed. Boylston Grammar School, Boston College, St. Charles' College, Ellicott City, Md., and St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore, Md., completing his theological studies at the latter institute in 1876. On December 23rd of that year, he was ordained in Baltimore. His first field of duty was St. Patrick's Parish, Roxbury, Mass., and there he labored for nearly twelve years; was appointed pastor of St. Bridget's Church, Abington, and its mission in Whitman in 1888. About 1897 he was given charge of St. Vincent's Parish, South Boston, one of the poorest in the archdiocese and also in a bad condition when Father Patterson became pastor, but he succeeded in reclaiming the district spiritually, and to some extent materially; the church was renovated and made one of the finest in that part of the City, the regular choir was improved and a sanctuary choir for men and boys organized that won more than local fame; various organizations were established for the spiritual, mental, and physical benefit of the congregation, and the liquor evil was lessened in the district. After ten years of labor, he was appointed rector of the Cathedral of the Holy Cross, Boston (October, 1907), and in the following December was appointed one of two vicars-general of the archdiocese. In April 1909, he was elevated by the Holy Father to the rank of Monsignor. In January, 1910, he was transferred to the pastorship of the Church of SS. Peter and Paul, South Boston, on which occasion he resigned the office of vicar-general. He is an honorary member and spiritual director of the Catholic Union, and chairman of its Catholic Truth Committee; member of the Church Music Commission of the Archdiocese of Boston, the American-Irish Historical Society, and is diocesan director of the Holy Name Societies. PHILLIPS, Hon. Charles Francis Lacey:

Eldest s. of Samuel Richards Phillips, by his wife, Anne Mélanie Berry-King, both deceased; b. July 5, 1846, in Philadelphia, Pa. Descended, paternally, from an English family, of Roman origin, resident in Britain since the early part of the Christian era; maternally, from an old Catholic family of Maryland, of English, Irish, and French origin. His father, the first member of the family born in America, took an active part in the promotion of American enterprises, a pioneer in many undertakings of importance, he was also enthusiastically devoted to historical research, and left a valuable library of about fifty thousand volumes, which had always been open to the use of the scholarly public, largely composed of works relating to the discovery and settlement of America, and to the growth and development of its people and their institutions. Born a Protestant, he was always an earnest friend of Catholic education and a professed admirer of Catholic polity, and prior to his death, which occurred in 1880, became a most sincere and humble convert to the faith. Mr. Phillips was educated by private tutors, and attended the School of the Assumption, Philadelphia, Pa.; his higher studies were made at Saint Joseph's College, Philadelphia; Georgetown College, District of Columbia; and St. John's College, Fordham, N. Y. (A.B., 1865; M.A., later); traveled abroad, after graduation, and continued his studies in the principal cities of learning. Placed by his family under the protection, in England, of Cardinal Manning and the Hon. Charles Francis Adams, then Ambassador of the United States at the Court of St. James; in France, Italy, Austria, and elsewhere, of princely personages eminent for their piety and wisdom; and, in Rome, of the Papal Court, he enjoyed special advantages of education, and an intimate acquaintance with Catholic sentiment and tradition. Returning home, he devoted several years to a careful study of the industrial, commercial and financial conditions of the day, and gave considerable attention, also, to journalism, contributing editorials and other articles to the secular and religious press and aiding in the management of Lippincott's Magazine; aided the historian, John Foster Kirk, and others, in the revision and editing of a number of important works. Entered upon the practice of law, and while still actively engaged in the exercise of his duties as juris-consult, is occupied almost exclusively with matters relating to public and private corporations, and to constitutional and international law. Has been largely interested in railroading, banking, and industrial operations, and as a director in a number of companies and institutions, he often acted as their counsel. Life Fellow of the London Institute of Bankers, and as such occupied with matters of European finance; one of the first publicists to urge upon American bankers the advisability of adopting the branch bank system and other measures of reform and development suggested by the successful practice of the old world; took an active part in the practical labors required to secure the acceptance and realization of the plans proposed. By request, he acted for a while as consul ad interim, in Philadelphia, for the Republic of Mexico; accepted from that country a special mission whose object was the extension of its commercial relations. Also sat, about this period, as a court of final arbitration for the adjustment of private differences arising out of trade between the United States and the Latin-American countries. For some years President of the Particular Council of Philadelphia, of the Society of Saint Vincent de Paul; has participated in the work of the Council General, in Paris, and of Particular Councils and local Conferences in various parts of the world, especially in France. Is interested in reform work among prisoners, and also in the formation of clubs and societies for the benefit of boys and young men, particularly those of the working classes, and in literary and similar organizations operating under Catholic auspices. Interested in the establishment and improvement of public libraries; served several years as

Chairman of the Administrative Committee of the Brooklyn Public Library. Delivered many addresses, and has written numerous papers, upon subjects connected with education, literature, sociology, finance, politics, law, and religion; one of the most important of these, relating to finance, appeared in the volume, published in 1907, by the Macmillans of London and New York (8vo., pp. XXVI, 596), under the title of Practical Problems in Banking and Currency. The careful editorship of Mr. Walter Henry Hull, brought together the most important discourses pronounced through a series of years before the American Bankers Association. The introduction to this volume, and the preface of the major portion of the Guide to Europe, which has been adopted by the Cunard Steamship Co. for the use of its passengers (International Guide Co. of New York, London, and Paris, 1908) was written by Mr. Phillips. He was one of the founders of the Catholic Club of Philadelphia, and is a member of the Catholic Club of New York; one of the founders, and a life member of the Champlain Club, organized for the purpose of aiding the work of the Catholic Summer School; life member of the Hibernian Society of Philadelphia, an institution which dates back to the days of the Revolution, and of which Washington was an early member. Mr. Phillips married the Honorable Francesca di Galvagni, whose family has held a distinguished position in Italy since the Augustan period. Her father, Pietro di Galvagni, noted for his civic enterprise and patronage of art, his bountiful charities and his devotion to the Holy See, was a loyal friend of Pius IX, from whom he received high honor. He spent a number of years in Vienna, where he caused a number of beautiful buildings to be erected for the improvement of the city, and was held in great esteem by the Emperor of Austria and other sovereigns whose friendship he enjoyed. His gallery of paintings, of the mediæval period and that of the Renaissance, was one of the most important of the private collections of Europe. Address: The Pines, New Dorp, Staten Island, New York City.

RICHARDS, Garrett T.:

Lawyer; b. in Chambersburg, Pa.; s. of a well-known physician of Baltimore, who moved to Chambersburg when a young man, and was surgeon in charge of a hospital in that place during the early part of the Civil War, later being appointed on the staff of the surgeon-general. Mr. Richards is of Welsh origin on both father's and mother's side, but it was in the seventeenth century that his mother's ancestors came to this country, settling in Maryland. His great-grandfather on his father's side came to America in the latter part of the eighteenth century. He was a learned divine and went to Maryland under the auspices of Lady Huntington, where he married a Miss Custis of Virginia. On both sides of the house Mr. Richards is thus identified with the early history of the American occupation of Maryland; ed. in Switzerland and Germany, returning to this country in 1863, entering Columbia Law School about a year later, after his father's home, which contained many precious heirlooms and a large and valuable library, had been destroyed by Confederate soldiers; graduated in 1866, and began the practice of law in New York, but soon went to Erie, Pa.; removed to California in 1868, and formed a partnership with the late Judge Charles Fernald of Santa Barbara, and has been in active practice there ever since; was elected mayor of Santa Barbara in 1875, served one term, and was afterwards city attorney; was nominated by the Republican state convention one of the candidates for justice of the Supreme Court, but not elected; served as president of the Chamber of Commerce of Santa Barbara for the year 1903–04; became a convert to the Catholic Church twenty-five years ago, and was baptized by Archbishop Riordan at St. Mary's Cathedral, San Francisco, Chief Justice Morrisson of the Supreme Court of California acting as his sponsor; m. Eldest d. of Henry Livingston and Cynthia (Cowles) Richards; b. in the year 1843, in Columbus, Ohio; conditionally baptized when twelve years old, her father and her uncle, the well-known William Richards, having become converts to the Church; ed. in private schools and at the Convent of the Sacred Heart, Manhattanville, N. Y. Address: Winchester, Mass.

RICHARDS, Miss Mary:

Youngest d. of Henry L. and Cynthia (Cowles) Richards; b. in 1855, in Jersey City, N. J.; ed. in private schools of New Jersey; the public schools of Boston; and at the Convent of the Sacred Heart, Kenwood, N. Y. Charter member and director of the Winchester, Mass., Visiting Nurses' Association, and a member of the Charity Council of Winchester. Residence: Winchester, Mass.

RICHARDS, William Douglas:

Importer of iron and steel; b. August 18, 1848, in Columbus, Ohio; s. of Henry L. and Cynthia (Cowles) Richards. His paternal ancestors came to Plymouth about 1630, and went from there to New London, where they were among the early settlers, and participated in the French and Indian Wars. His great-grandfather, Colonel William Richards, was a colonel in the Revolutionary Army, and his grandfather, Dr. William Richards, was one of the early settlers of the State of Ohio. The father of William Douglas Richards was an Episcopal Clergyman, and pastor of St. Paul's Church, Columbus, Ohio, for ten years. He entered the Catholic Church in 1852, and his conversion created such a sensation in Ohio that he was forced to go East in order that he might engage in business and support his family. He went to Boston in 1869, and was one of the leading Catholics in that city until his death in 1903, in his ninetieth year. On the maternal side, Mr. Richards' ancestors settled in Shelter Island in 1641, going there from the New Haven Colony and the Dutch settlements of New York, and his great-grandfather, James Kilbourne, who settled Worthington, Ohio, was the first member of Congress from that district, being elected for the first time in 1812, and serving in the Thirteenth and Fourteenth sessions of Congress. William Douglas Richards was educated in the private and public schools of Jersey City, N. J., and at Seton Hall College; was Selectman of the Town of Winchester in 1906, 1907, 1908, 1909, being still in office; was the first president of the Boston Chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution; is a member of the Federation of Catholic Societies; Holy Name Society; Chamber of Commerce, Boston; Sons of the American Revolution. RIGGE, Rev. William Francis, S.J.:

Astronomer, educator; b. September 9, 1857, at Cincinnati, Ohio; ed. in parish schools, Cincinnati, Ohio; St. Xavier College, Cincinnati; and Woodstock College, Maryland. College professor in Chicago, 1884–87; St. Louis, 1891–95; Washington, D. C., 1895–96; Omaha, Neb., 1878–81; and from 1896 to date. Entered the Society of Jesus, July 14, 1875; ordained by Cardinal Gibbons, August 24, 1890. September, 1895, to July, 1896, was at the Georgetown College Observatory, engaged in scientific researches with Rev. Father Hagen, now director of the Vatican Observatory, and with Father Hedrick (now director); principal work consisted of the photographic determination of the variation of latitude. The feeble light used in the handling of the plates, the microscopic measurements and the continuous calculations, impaired Fr. Rigge's eyesight to such an extent that he was obliged to relinquish his astronomical experiments and confine himself to the class room. Since September, 1896, he has been instructor in astronomy, mathematics, and physics at Creighton University, Omaha, where he is Director of the Creighton University Observatory, which is primarily a students' observatory, and as such is probably the best equipped of its kind in the United States. Father Rigge is thus enabled to observe occasional phenomena, reports of which may be found in the proper technical journals; writing on astronomical subjects, for technical and popular magazines, has become (as much as his duties and feeble eyesight will allow), the feature of his life. Contributor to Astronomische Nachrichten, The Astrophysical Journal, The Astronomical Journal, Popular Astronomy, The Technology Quarterly, The Scientific American, Science, Publications of the United States Naval Observatory, School Science and Mathematics, Benziger's Magazine, St. Michael's Almanac, Omaha Bee, Omaha World Herald, The True Voice, Familienfreund, America, American Catholic Quarterly Review, Monthly Weather Review, and Regensburger Marien Kalender. Member of the Royal Astronomical Society, formerly The Astronomische Gesellschaft of Academy of Science, St. Louis, Mo.; Fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society of England. RILEY, James:

Poet and novelist; b. August 15, 1848, opposite the Chapel at Tang, in the parish of Nohill, County Westmeath, Ireland; s. of James and Margaret Riley; came to America in August, 1854, and was educated in the common schools of Middleboro, Mass.; m. Sarah Jane Weeks of Middleboro, who died one year later; became acquainted with John Boyle O'Reilly of the Boston Pilot, who, with Charles E. Hurd, then Literary Editor of The Boston Transcript, thought they saw for him a future as a poet; has written stories and prose for the Boston Pilot and the Independent; poetry for the Youth's Companion, and The Christian Endeavor World; has furnished work for the McClure Syndicate; contributor in prose and verse to The Boston Transcript, Springfield Republican, and many other publications; has published two volumes of verse, Poems (1887), and Songs of Two People (1898); author of a novel entitled Christy of Rathglin, published in 1907 (the C. M. Clark Publishing Co. of Boston). Rathglin is another name for Tang, the author's birthplace in Ireland, just a mile from Sweet Auburn, that historic spot in the Emerald Isle, where Oliver Goldsmith was born.

With its ash tree and its hawthorn and its lark that heavenly sang,
Sure no roadway went to heaven but my Irish one at Tang.

The eviction scene, as told in this novel, is an exact transcription from memory of the family's experience when evicted from the house in which he was born. Of this work, Maurice Francis Egan wrote: For color in style, for real human interest, for power in painting humanity, Christy of Rathglin exceeds any novel, published this year, that I have read. Mr. Riley made a four months' trip to England, Ireland, and France, in 1889, visiting his birthplace and being present at some heart-rending eviction scenes in Mayo, of which he wrote to the Boston Pilot and Republic. He became Editor of the Orphan's Bouquet in 1885, and while on that paper, of all the bright young minds who wrote for its children's column, he singled out Charles Phillips, of New Richmond, Wis., as the most promising. The little Western boy of that day is now the well-known editor of the San Francisco Monitor. After retiring from the Bouquet, Mr. Riley edited the Father Mathew Herald for a time. He is now engaged in writing a novel on the Revolution. Address: 11 Union Park, Boston, Mass.

ROBERTSON, Mrs. W. F.:

B. Annie Dowling, only d. of Major R. W. (Dick) Dowling, the hero of the Confederate fort at Sabine Pass. On September 8, 1863, while forty-two men, including Major Dowling, were stationed at this fort, a Federal fleet, consisting of several ships, a large number of officers and about 15,000 men, under command of General Franklin, sailed up the pass, prepared to invade Texas. In the battle which followed, several of the Federal ships were disabled, two were sunk, a large number of men and officers killed, wounded and taken prisoners, and the Federal Army successfully repulsed. Major Dowling and his men were given a vote of thanks by the Confederate Congress, and each was presented with a medal; in 1889, the Texas Legislature, presented Mrs. Robertson (then Miss Dowling), a handsome medal, in appreciation of the services rendered the people of Texas by her father. At the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, Mrs. Robertson was elected a member of the Board of Lady Managers for the State of Texas. She is a granddaughter of the late Hon. Benjamin Digby Adlum, one of Fannin's men, and afterwards a member of the Congress of the Republic of Texas. Address: Austin, Tex.

Address: 95 Mt. Vernon St., Boston, Mass.

ROBINSON, John Erigena:

Journalist; b. October 26, 1855; at Newark, N. J.; s. of William Erigena and Helen Augusta (Dougherty) Robinson. His father, a tolerant, broad-minded Irish-American Presbyterian, was the author of the Expatriation Law, a friend of Archbishop John Hughes, and a champion of the Roman Catholics during the Native American and Know Nothing troubles; his godfather was General Thomas Francis Meagher. Ed. at Seton Hall College, South Orange, N. J. (A.B., 1874); studied law for a short time but preferring journalism, became a member of the staff of the New York Herald in 1876; edited war news during the civil war in Chile in 1891; now employed on the Associated Press, New York World, New York American and New York Times; at present engaged in literary work.

During the A.P.A. excitement he planned a lecture on the history of religious intolerance in the U. S. to be delivered in the principal American cities as a reply to A.P.A. falsehoods; George Parsons Lathrop was to have delivered the lecture but did so only once. Address: 616 Fulton St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

ROBINSON, Fr. Paschal, O.F.M.:

Writer; member of the Franciscans, and a well-known authority on Franciscalia. Author of A Short Introduction to Franciscan Literature; The Real St. Francis of Assisi, a series of brochures that appeared in the Messenger (June–September, 1903). As a critique on M. Sabatier's Vie de St. François Fr. Robinson says: "However much the purely biographical portion of M. Sabatier's book may be crippled by his entire lack of sympathy with St. Francis' religious standpoint, that part of the work which deals with early Franciscan history, and which is at once the most interesting and valuable, has served to open up a new era in the study of the sources and, if we are now in the maelstrom of books dealing with St. Francis, it is due largely to the energy and enthusiasm with which M. Sabatier has followed up this subject." Fr. Robinson cites Sabatier's many predecessors in the field to prove, however, that the world had not hitherto been left in ignorance of the Poverello, and that M. Sabatier would be the last to undervalue their research and erudition. Fr. Robinson is also the Editor of The Writings of St. Francis of Assisi, newly translated into English (The Dolphin Press, 1906), and he has in preparation a complete biography of the life of St. Francis. There are those who say that a critical life of the real St. Francis is yet to be written; Catholics who know Fr. Robinson's talents, and his devotion to the subject, will await his book with interest. Address: Mt. St. Sepulchre, Brookland, D. C.

ROBYN, Alfred G.:

Composer; b. April 29, 1860, in St. Louis, Mo.; s. of William Robyn (organizer of the first orchestra west of Pittsburg, and founder (1838) of the St. Louis Philharmonic Society), and Clemence (Miltenberger) Robyn, a celebrated singer. M. October 18, 1910, Isidora M. Schmitt, of Chicago. At the age of nine he played a Mozart piano concerto with orchestra; at eleven, was organist in one of the leading churches; at thirteen, published his first efforts at composition; at fifteen, made his début as a violinist with a Rode concerto; at seventeen, he was pianist for the Emma Abbott Concert Company; since then has devoted himself to various musical lines in which he is proficient, namely, conductor, composer, pianist and organist. Received degree of Doctor of Music from St. Louis University. Has been called to New York to fill the responsible position of organist and choirmaster at the Tompkins Ave. Congregational Church in Brooklyn. Visited Europe eleven times, giving concerts in all the large cities. His versatility as a composer is remarkable, the range of his work covering comic opera, oratorio, chamber music, symphonies, popular songs, operettas, cantatas, concertos, etc. The best known of his comic operas are: The Yankee Consul, The Yankee Tourist, Manette, Marlin, Princess Beggar, Beans and Buttons, Soldier in Petticoats, Jacinta, Court Martial, and A Slim Legacy. Among his songs may be mentioned: It Was a Dream, You, Answer, Manzanillo, Evermore, Fulfilled, etc. Is at present engaged on an opera entitled Padishah, dealing with Tripoli, to be brought out next August in St. Louis; the book is by John Wilson. Mr. Robyn's oratorio, Love Divine, introduces in the finale such a novel effect that it has been pronounced akin to Die Meistersinger. Member and on Board of Directors, Manuscript Society of N. Y. Member Missouri Historical Society, Artists Guild, etc. Clubs: St. Louis; Missouri Athletic; Glen Echo; Green Room and Lambs (N. Y.); South Shore (Chicago). Address: 450 Riverside Drive, New York City.

Address: Ste. Flavie Station, Que., Canada.

ROTH, Edward:

Educator; b. February 6, 1826, in Kilkenny, Ireland; his ancestors were mayors, aldermen, and church men for 500 years. David Roth of St. Canice's, was the last Catholic bishop who kept his See, after the Reformation, and his brother, Edward Roth, built the Roth mansion on Parliament St., Kilkenny, in 1594, a perfect specimen of the street architecture of that period. Archbishop Ussher of Dublin, pronounced by Dr. Johnson the great luminary of the Irish (Protestant) church, and one of the greatest theologians of any age, characterizes Bishop Roth (who wrote a history of Ireland in Latin), as Patriarum antiquitatum indagator diligentis-simus (a most diligent investigator of the antiquities of his native land). But he is better known in Irish history as the organizer of the Confederation of Kilkenny to support the weak King Charles I against his mortal foes, the Puritans. Edward, David, and Michael Roth were aldermen of the remodeled corporation of 1687. Michael and his son Edward, Comte de Roth, were distinguished military commanders in Ireland and France, from 1686 to 1766. Edward, Comte de Roth, Colonel of the Brigade Regiment known as Roth's, served in the Army of the Rhine till 1744, when he passed into the army commanded by the Marshal de Saxe; fought with the Irish Brigade at the victory of Fontenoy in 1745. Serving for several years in the Low Countries, he was made Lieutenant-General of the Irish and Scotch troops in 1759, distinguished himself in various actions until his death in 1766. His widow, an English woman of the noble house of Cary, called in France the Countess de Roth, but the Honorable Mrs. Roth in England, to which country she soon retired, survived him till 1804. With the death of Count Edward de Roth, the distinction of the Roth family ended. The Penal Laws by sweeping some into poverty and the rest into Protestantism soon reduced them all to the ranks of the Ignobile Vulgus. Edward Roth was educated in private schools of Kilkenny; Burrel's Hall, and Trinity College, Dublin, Ireland; was teacher at St. Mary's College, Wilmington, Del., from 1846 to 1860, and received degree of A.M. from that institution. Was Vice-President of St. Mary's College, 1856–60; Principal Broad St. Academy, Philadelphia, Pa., 1862–92. Considers the most valuable act of his life to have been the starting of a Catholic school in Philadelphia, without any help, and conducting it for 30 years; some of the scholars being sons and grandsons of former pupils. Author of Life of Napoleon III (Donahoe, Boston, 1857); Christus Judex (Leypoldt, Philadelphia, 1864); Château Morville, Rouge et Noir, and Legauvé's Art of Reading (translated from the French); also Jules Verne's Astronomical Romances (Claxton, Remsen & Hoffelfinger, Philadelphia, 1860–70); How Gladstone disestablished Protestantism in Ireland (McVey, Philadelphia, 1909). Has written educational works, grammars in English, Latin, and German, geographies, etc. Contributor of poetry, sketches, stories, lectures, etc., to the Boston Pilot, Sartain Magazine, the Metropolitan, and the Catholic Standard. In 1858 and 1860 made extensive journeys, mostly on foot, in the United States, Europe, and Australia. Member of Friendly Sons of St. Patrick for nearly 50 years. Address: 1135 Pine St., Philadelphia, Pa.

SCHNEIDERHAHN, Edward Vincent Paul:

Attorney-at-law; b. September 23, 1874, in St. Louis, Mo.; s. of M. Schneiderhahn, religious sculptor, by his wife, Frances Bleckmann. His father was the youngest of ten, and his mother the eldest of eleven children; their son, the subject of this sketch, was one of thirteen children. Mr. Schneiderhahn received his early training in parish schools, and pursued his higher course at St. Louis University (degree of A.B.), and Washington University (degree of LL.B.). At the age of sixteen, having conceived a great admiration for self-made men, he interrupted his studies to gain for himself the means for further education, kept up with the classes through private study, and graduated with the same class which he had originally entered. Has practiced law for fourteen years. Is at present Vice-President of the Council of the City of St. Louis (the Council is the upper House of the Municipal Assembly and is elected by the entire city); member of the Catholic Union of Missouri (a state organization of approximately 11,000 members), and was its President two years; member of the German Roman Catholic Central Verein; member of the American Federation of Catholic Societies; member of various civic societies, and is often called upon to address them on civic questions. Is an advocate of divorce reform, continually asserting that the principle of absolute divorce admits the principle of polygamy in amended form, and that the admission of the principal of absolute divorce is many times the temptation to produce the cause for the very purpose of divorce. Advocates the denial of the sanction of law to so called common law marriages; advocates the religious education of youth, and points to the increase in juvenile crime and depravity in proof of the necessity. Is frequently called upon to address German and English Catholic audiences in various cities on the above topics Address: 1131 South Seventh Street, St. Louis, Mo.

SCHNEIDERHAHN, Maximilian:

Sculptor; b. May 18, 1844, at Rexingen, Wurtemberg, Germany; received his preliminary education in the grammar schools, and when ten years old, entered the Gymnasium at Ravensburg where his eldest brother, Rev. Vincenz Schneiderhahn, Ph.D., D.D., was professor. After studying sculpture and painting for four years, he went to the renowned art centre, Munich, and entered the atelier of Professor Knabl; studied sculpture, especially religious sculpture, under him for four years, entered the famous Academy of Fine Arts of Munich, and graduated with highest honors. When 25 years old, he was one of the exhibitors and, with one exception, the youngest exhibitor at the great International Art Exposition at Munich in 1869. Every work exhibited had first to pass a jury of world famed artists before being admitted. At that time some commissions received from America caused him to come to this country (1870). Since then he has been engaged in his chosen profession of religious sculpture, and has executed commissions received from all parts of the country. The elevation and inspiration of the beholder by the highest religious art has been the aim of his life. All of the statues and groups are his own original designs. In the Last Supper he claims that many of the well known paintings and sculptures depict the moment of the greatest dramatic confusion. "One of you will betray Me." Mr. Schneiderhahn maintains that for the Christian sculptor the most sacred moment to be portrayed is the institution of the Sacrament itself, "This is My Body, this is My Blood," a more difficult subject, but one the true religious portrayal of which involves the highest art. The original of Mr. Schneiderhahn's Last Supper may be seen in the Mother House of the Notre Dame Sisters at Milwaukee. Other well-known groups are the Pietà in finest white marble, St. John's Church, Quincy, Ill.; Holy Agony group, St. Vincent's Church, St. Louis, Mo.; Crucifixion group, St. Joseph's Church, St. Louis, Mo.; Holy Family group, St. Louis; Good Shepherd, St. Anthony's Church, San Francisco, Cal. In later years pictures of the statues and groups executed by Mr. Schneiderhahn have been much in demand and he has published various copyrighted editions of such pictures. The most noted are The Last Supper, The Holy Agony and Mater Dolorosa. Address: 1131 South Seventh St., St. Louis, Mo.

SHIPMAN, Andrew Jackson:

Historian littérateur, attorney-at-law; b. October 15, 1857, at Springvale, Fairfax County, Va.; s. of John James Shipman of Aldie, Loudoun County, Va., by his wife, Priscilla Carroll of Upper Marlborough, Prince George County, Md. The Shipmans came from England to America early in 1700, they settled in New York and Connecticut, and different branches of the family afterwards located in Pennsylvania and Virginia. On his mother's side Mr. Shipman is a lineal descendant of Thomas Carroll, who, following the elder Charles Carroll and his other relatives then settled in Maryland, came over in 1725 with his wife, Elizabeth Pope of Liverpool, a relative of the family of Alexander Pope. Mr. Shipman's great-grandfather, Daniel Carroll, and his granduncle, Charles Carroll, were in the wars of the Revolution and 1812, respectively. Andrew Jackson Shipman received his early training in the elementary schools of Virginia, later entering Georgetown Preparatory School and then Georgetown University; graduated in 1878 with the degree of A.B.; also received the degree of A.M. in 1889. His legal education was acquired in the University of New York, graduated in 1886; same year admitted to the New York bar. For two years after leaving college he edited a country newspaper in Virginia, and then became assistant manager of the coal mines of W. P. Rend & Co. in Ohio. Entered the United States customs service in New York; became assistant secretary to the Collector of the Port; in 1885 was one of the investigators of the Sugar Frauds at the Port of New York. Left the customs service and engaged in the private practice of law for a short time; in 1890 he formed a partnership with Edmund L. Mooney, which continued until 1895, when Charles Blandy entered the firm, which has ever since been known as Blandy, Mooney & Shipman, New York City. While engaged in the active practice of the law, Mr. Shipman has been counsel in a number of celebrated cases involving the law of religious corporations, of labor organizations, and of testamentary matters, which have in some measure determined the law of New York State. The most notable of these cases were the St. Stephen's Church case, 1890–94; the National Protective Association cases in 1898–1900, involving the right to strike; the Hopkins will cases, 1902–06, involving the cancellation of wills and the powers of Surrogates' courts. He has made himself familiar with nearly all the modern European languages, acquainted with their literature, and has made a special study of topics relating to Russia, Hungary, Galicia, the Greek Church and the Slavic nations, the Russian language and its literature, as well as the immigration which comes to the United States from those lands. He has visited those countries and the East in order to make personal observations, and has contributed articles on Russia, Hungary, and the Russian Church and its religious press, the Orthodox Greek Church, and on the Greek Catholics of Austria-Hungary, Italy, and the United States to the magazines, and has contributed articles on kindred subjects to the Catholic Encyclopedia. Contributor to the Century; Charities; the Messenger; Pravoslavny Viestnik. Has made Greek Catholics known to their fellow Catholics, and has started several Greek Catholic Churches; also has lectured on the Eastern rites of the Church in use in the United States. m., June, 1893, Adair, daughter of George Mooney of New York, and niece of William Mooney of Leixlip Castle, Ireland. Is a member of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, Catholic Historical Society, Southern Society, the New York State Bar Association, the American Society of International Law, and the National Geographic Society, and is besides identified with a number of church and local civic organizations, and is one of the directors of the Catholic Encyclopedia as well as a contributor to it. He is a Democrat in political belief. Club: Catholic. Address: 37 Wall St., New York City.

SILO, James P.:

Art expert and auctioneer; b. in Ireland; is descended from an ancient Spanish-Italian family of title. Early engaged in the linen business for which Belfast is so famed, and was urged by his relative, who had extensive art interests in that city, to remain in Ireland; but while still in his teens he sailed for New York, where he arrived in 1870. Soon after coming to the Metropolis he met a friend of his Belfast days, Mr. Daniel O'Connell Townley, then editor of the New York Evening Mail, who was deeply interested in him and gave him much kindly and valuable advice. With steadfast devotion to business and fair, open dealing, he has made his own way from a minor position on the floor in the old-time general auctioneering firm of Johnston & Van Tassell, to the front rank of his profession. He is well known in both hemispheres as the founder and head of the Fifth Avenue Art Galleries (the only auction house on the aristocratic thoroughfare of which it bears the name). His galleries are established in an imposing building referred to as The Little Christies's of Fifth Avenue. Mr. Silo commenced business on his own account in the old Evening Post building at Nassau and Liberty Sts., afterwards establishing the popular Silo Art Galleries at 43 Liberty St., where he remained until ten years ago (1900), when he removed to Fifth Ave. at Thirty-fifth St. He was one of the pioneers in the now famous uptown business movement on the avenue. M. Kate Lyons of New York City; their son, James P. Silo, Jr., has entered his father's establishment. For four years Mr. Silo was sheriff's auctioneer; he has conducted by appointment the appraisals of several of the largest and most important estates' settlements in New York City. Is a member of the Fifth Avenue Association. Clubs: Catholic, New York Athletic, Democratic, Irish American Athletic, Dunwoodie Country. Address: Fifth Avenue Art Galleries, New York City.

SLOAN, William Hill:

Educator and author; b. Fort Washita, Indian Territory (now Oklahoma), September 4, 1843; s. of Surgeon William James Sloan, U. S. A., by Eliza St. Clair, a descendant of the Scotch General Arthur St. Clair, of Revolutionary fame; ed. by the Christian Brothers, Santa Fé, N. M., at the Commercial College, Leavenworth, Kan., and at the University of Rochester, N. Y. (degrees of A.B. and M.A.); entered Baptist Theological Seminary, Rochester, in 1870, and the same year married Ida Preston. In 1873, ordained to the Baptist Ministry at Walworth, N. Y.; and appointed to a pastorate at Marion, N. Y., at the same time acting as Principal of the Marion Academy. Previous to this Mr. Sloan had learned the trade of a printer while in the West, and had also served in the United States Army during the Civil War, both of which experiences fitted him to some extent for Missionary life on a foreign field. He was sent, in 1875, to Rangoon, Burmah, and became superintendent of an extensive missionary printing-plant and treasurer of the mission. Prepared and published his Practical Method with the Burmese Language, a book that is still extensively used in Burmah by those who wish to acquire the language. Returned to the United States in 1878 and settled over the Baptist Church in Canandaigua, N. Y.; transferred to Albion, N. Y., where he spent five years. In 1884 he was urged by the American Baptist Home Mission Society to undertake a mission to Mexico for the conversion of Roman Catholics to Protestantism, and he accepted the appointment. He took a printing press with him, and established himself in the City of Mexico, where other workers had preceded him by a few months. His success was that usually attained by those who seek proselytes. A number of people gathered around him, he built a fine church edifice, published a religious paper call La Luz (The Light), and by his writings and addresses awakened among Americans a good deal of interest in the conversion of Mexico. After four years he returned with his family to the United States to place his children in school, and labored for a short time in Kansas City, Mo., and for four years as pastor of the First Baptist Church of Toledo, Ohio. In 1903 he returned to Mexico, and renewed his labors as a missionary. He built churches in the City of Mexico, Puebla, San Luis Potosi, and Aguascalientes, and issued many tracts and leaflets from his printing press, devoting seven years to the preparation of a Concordance to the Holy Scriptures, in Spanish, printing it four pages at a time on a little treadle-press, as he could find no one in the United States who would publish it for him. Much of the type he set with his own hands, and all the pages were made up by him. Only one thousand copies were printed, the work was not stereotyped, and copies are already becoming scarce. Archbishop Labastida, of Mexico, was much pleased with the book, and ordered four copies for himself. A number of other books came from his pen, chiefly religious, and all in Spanish. Mr. Sloan's views had been undergoing a change for several years, and in 1908 he united with the Catholic Church, receiving baptism in the parish of San Lorenzo, City of Mexico. Member of the Knights of Columbus and the Grand Army of the Republic. Is at present engaged as Professor of Languages in private Mexican Catholic families. Present Address: Fifth Cedro No. 169, City of Mexico, Mex.

SMITH, Rev. William St. Elmo, S.P.M.:

Chaplain of the New York Fire Department, a post which came into being about 1900. At the time of the terrible fire of the Windsor Hotel, so many men and women were called to their final accounting without preparation, and the clergy from the Cathedral nearby found so much difficulty in getting through the fire lines, that the then commissioner, the Hon. J. J. Scannell, thought of having a recognized chaplain among the uniform forces. The late Archbishop Corrigan and the late Bishop Potter were approached on the subject, which received their warm approval. Father Smith was one of the two chaplains subsequently named; they are not only spiritual directors, but actual firemen, and are frequently called upon to assist in the work of fighting conflagrations — many times helping to place a ladder or run a hose to a point where new danger is imminent. Father Smith was born in Ottawa, Can., May 6, 1859; matriculated in the college of Montreal at the age of eleven years, graduating six years later; went to England, where he passed two years, then returned to the United States and entered the seminary at Baltimore, Md., whence he repaired to Brooklyn, N. Y., to make his novitiate in the order of Fathers of Mercy; ordained in Brooklyn at the age of twenty-four years. In the year 1873, made pastor of the Church of Our Lady of Victories at Paterson, N. J.; remained for a year and a half; subsequently went to France and officiated as vice rector in the college of Rauzan. Returned to America and was appointed pastor of the Church of St. Francis de Sales in Brooklyn, now Church of

Our Lady of Lourdes; while there he was also spiritual director of St. Louis College for four years. Transferred to Cleveland, and finally appointed pastor of the Church of St. Louis, Toledo, Ohio; returned to New York (1892) to the Church of St. Vincent de Paul, and served there until March 29, 1889, when he was appointed Chaplain to the fire department, which office he still holds. Father Smith has made about eleven trips to Europe, and has roamed nearly over the entire globe, including Asia Minor, Palestine and other countries in the Far East. Conducted two or three pilgrimages to Rome to wait upon the Pope and to visit the shrine of Our Lady of Lourdes. Address: 120 West Twenty-fourth St., New York City.

SMYTH, Constantine J.:

Lawyer, Attorney-General; b. County Cavin, Ireland, December 3, 1859; received his early education in the national schools, but left Ireland at the age of ten to come to America, where he attended private schools and then Creighton University; received the degree of A.M. from Creighton University in June, 1907; m. Catherine F. Murphy, a first cousin of Bishop Nulta, of Meath; elected to the State Legislature in 1887; served one term; in 1890 was elected a member of the school board of the City of Omaha, and served four years; in 1894 elected chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, and served two years; in 1896 elected chairman of the Democratic delegation to the Chicago National Convention and took an active part in behalf of Mr. Bryan's candidacy; in 1896 elected Attorney-General of Nebraska, and re-elected in 1898. During his encumbency of the office of Attorney-General, he appeared for the State in a number of noted criminal and civil actions. He prosecuted the State Treasurer for having embezzled over half a million dollars, convicted him and had him sentenced to 20 years in the state penitentiary; prosecuted and convicted the City Treasurer of the City of Omaha for having embezzled over a hundred thousand dollars; prosecuted and convicted the State Auditor for having embezzled over twenty-three thousand dollars, and convicted a number of county officers of like crimes. He appeared for the State in the maximum freight rate case, in which was involved the constitutionality of an act passed by the State of Nebraska, fixing the maximum freight rates which railroads doing business in the State might charge. This case was fought through all the courts to the Supreme Court of the United States. The opinion appears under the title of Smyth vs. Ames, et al, and is reported in United States Reports. Mr. Smyth was nominated for Governor of the State of Nebraska by the democratic party in 1898 and again in 1900; was elected State Deputy in 1906, re-elected in 1907, and again in 1908; associate dean of the law school of Creighton University; is at present engaged in the practice of law, as a member of the firm of Smyth & Smith; became Grand Knight of the local council of the Knights of Columbus in 1902; elected at Jamestown, Va., as a member of the Board of Directors of the Knights of Columbus in 1907, and still holds this position; delivered the address on Columbus Day, 1908, at Carnegie Hall, New York, under the auspices of the

SPALDING, Rev. Henry S., S.J.:

Educator, author; b. 1865, at Bardstown, Ky.; studied at St. Joseph's College, Bardstown, and St. Mary's College, Kansas; after entering the Jesuit Order, studied at St. Louis University and Woodstock College, Md.; ordained priest (1899) at Woodstock, by His Eminence Cardinal Gibbons. Served as professor of the Humanities at Creighton College, Omaha, Neb.; Vice-President of Marquette University, 1902–08; at present (1910) instructor at Loyola University, Chicago. Author of The Cave by the Beech Fork (1902), which met with immediate success, being printed as a serial story by at least seven English journals. Of this book Maurice Francis Egan says: in The Cave a new genre is created in American Catholic literature, and he adds: all the fresh air books provided for boys had hitherto been written by non-Catholics, and the lessons taught were the commercially virtuous maxims of Benjamin Franklin, which are as devoid of spiritual life as those of Polonius in his famous counsels to his son Laertes. Dr. Egan concludes: a dozen more books as true, as interesting, as honestly religious, as manly as that, are, we hope, to be expected from his pen. Later works were The Sheriff of the Beech Fork; The Race for Copper Island, followed by its sequel, The Marks of the Bear Claws; and Wethrose Mill (all published by Benziger Bros.); contributor to the Catholic Encyclopedia of an article on Marquette. Father Spalding has also written the life of Marquette which is to appear in January, 1911. Address: Loyola University, Chicago, Ill.

SPALDING, James Field:

Author, lecturer, educator; b. December 5, 1839, at Enfield, Conn.; s. of Asa Leffingwell (M.D.) and Mary (Dixon) Spalding. M. April 28, 1864, Mary Harper, of Enfield, Conn. Ed. at Williston Seminary, Easthampton, Mass.; Williams College (graduate, 1862; A.M., 1865; S.T.D., 1887). Tutor at Williams College, 1863–64; associate principal, Round Hill School, Northampton, 1865–70; P. E. clergyman, 1869–91. Professor of English Literature, Boston College, 1899–1903; lecturer in English literature at many Catholic schools, colleges, and theological seminaries since 1896. Author of The Teaching and Influence of Saint Augustine (1886); The World's Unrest and its Remedy (Longmans, Green, New York and London, 1898). Is a contributor to the leading literary periodicals. A convert to the Faith in 1892. In the World's Unrest and its Remedy Prof. Spalding says: It was the genuine authority . . . set forth by thinkers like St. Augustine among the ancients and Cardinal Newman among the moderns, which made such strong appeal to me. . . . If the Catholic religion is not the religion of Christ, it is nothing; if it is that religion, it appeals to all who come within its reach with the exclusiveness of truth. Those who heed the appeal will find the sure remedy for the world's unrest. Member of the Phi Beta Kappa. Address: 43 Larch Road, Cambridge, Mass.

SPALDING, Most Rev. John Lancaster: Archbishop; b. June 2, 1840, in Lebanon, Ky. From the founding of Spalding Abbey in Lincolnshire, England, in the middle ages to the present day, the family of Spalding has given to the Church in England and America many sons and daughters eminent for piety and learning: the American branch of the family dates back to the coming of Lord Baltimore, only a few years after the landing of the Puritans; among his ancestors are such representatives as the Abell, Hamilton and Lancaster families. As a boy, he was the special favorite of his uncle, Archbishop Spalding of Baltimore. Ed. at Mt. St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, Md.; University of Louvain, Belgium; American College, Rome. Only a few months after his ordination Father Spalding was chosen by Archbishop Blanchet as his theologian at the Second Plenary Council of Baltimore; he was one of the special preachers before the Council, and all this when he was only twenty-six years of age. Archbishop Spalding having died in the spring of 1872, leaving all his papers to Father Hecker, the latter summoned Father Spalding to New York to write the life of his uncle. Father Spalding took up his work with the Paulists and there wrote his first book. He remained in New York until 1877 when he was consecrated Bishop of Peoria. Secretary to the Bishop of Louisville, 1865; built St. Augustine Church for the Catholic negroes of Louisville, 1869; Chancellor of the Diocese of Louisville, 1871; in New York, 1872–77. Appointed by the President, one of the arbitrators in settlement of Anthracite Coal Strike, 1902. Author of the Life of Most Rev. M. J. SPEARMAN, Frank Hamilton:

Novelist; b. Buffalo, N. Y., September 6, 1859; s. of Simon and Emeline Eliza (Dunning) Spearman. An ancestor, Pierre D'Allixe, was a noted Huguenot divine who, with a company of persons of his faith, left France after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, and settled in London and its vicinity, introducing there many of the arts and manufactures for which their country was celebrated, especially the making of silk goods, hitherto unknown in England. The D'Allixes (now D'-Allees and Allees) came to America in 1690, settling in New York and afterward in Delaware. From them the Spearmans, English in the direct line, derive a French and a Dutch ancestry, and from the Dunnings (Delaware, 1690) a maternal English ancestry. Simon Spearman was a merchant and a planter in Smyrna, Del. He was at one time Auditor of the State, and from him were inherited the literary inclinations of the son. It was after his intimate friend, the eminent surgeon, Frank Hastings Hamilton, that the novelist was named. Frank H. Spearman was educated at a private school in Appleton, Wis., and at Lawrence University, same place; became a convert to and entered the Catholic Church on March 25, 1884, and has told the story of his conversion in Some Roads to Rome in America (Herder, St. Louis); m. on June 5, 1884, Eugenie Amelia Lonergan, d. of Thomas and Mary (Hagan) Lonergan. Thomas Lonergan, who came from Pittsburg to Chicago in 1841, was prominently identified with the business and political life of the latter city with its early upbuilding. His uncle, Father James English, was a co-worker in Ireland with Father Mathew in the great temperance movement which bears the name of the latter. Mary Lonergan was one of the founders of the Ephpheta Society for the deaf and dumb in Chicago and was well known in that City both socially and for her charities. Mr. Spearman has contributed freely both of fiction and economic articles to the American magazines and reviews, becoming known first as a writer of short stories; his railroad stories are especially known. His novels, however, embody his later and more mature work in fiction. His books of short stories are: The Nerve of Foley (Harper & Bros., 1900); Held for Orders (McClure, Philips & Co., 1901). His novels are: Doctor Bryson (Charles Scribner's Sons, 1902); The Daughter of a Magnate (Charles Scribner's Sons, 1903); The Close of the Day (D. Appleton & Co., 1904); Whispering Smith (Charles Scribner's Sons, 1906). He is also the author of The Strategy of Great Railroads (Charles Scribner's Sons, 1904) and Robert Kimberly, (Charles Scribner's Sons, 1911). During recent years he has spent much time with his wife and their four sons in American and European travel, Rome and Italy being favored abiding places. Address: Care of Charles Scribner's Sons, New York; Residence: Evanston, Ill.

SPELLACY, Timothy:

SPELLISSY, Denis Aloysius:

Lawyer; b. December 15, 1845, at Ennis, County Clare, Ireland; s. of Denis and Eliza (Molony) Spellissy; received early education in his native town, at Springfield College, an affiliated branch of London University; took prizes in various branches, and subsequently studied at colleges in Dublin and Galway; came to America in December, 1864; followed commercial pursuits for some time; entered the office of a broker and took up the study of law; admitted to the Bar of New York, New York City, 1870; m. January 28, 1878, Martha R. Gaughran. His practice has identified him with many cases of public importance, notably with those pertaining to the Eight-Hour Law, the Tenement House Bill, the Franchise Tax Law, Testamentary Legislation, and questions relating to the descent of real property. Serves frequently as referee in important cases sent to him by the Supreme and Surrogate's Courts, and has been appointed Commissioner for the condemnation of land for public purposes in the City of New York. One of the founders and first treasurer of the New York County Lawyers Ass'n; continues director of the association. Trustee of the State Savings Bank of New York City; for three years Chairman of the 19th Assembly District, County Democracy, and member of the Executive Committee of that body, in which capacity, in collaboration with Judges Beekman and Kilbreth, he drafted the original bill upon which the present Election Law was founded. Represented the Franchise Tax and Municipal Ownership League, of which he was President, on the Executive Committee of the Civic League in 1902 and 1903, and was active in that movement until the Franchise Tax Law was passed; procured the passing of the Tenement House Law. In 1905, he initiated a movement for the appropriation of a proportionate share of the Public School funds for such of the free schools in the state as would afford tuition to fifty pupils and come up to the standard of education prescribed by the State Board of Regents for the Public Schools, and drafted and introduced into the Legislature of New York, a Bill for that purpose; it failed to become a law, but the Bill, if enacted, would have given the Parochial Schools just compensation for their services in the secular education of Catholic children taught by them, from the expense of which the State is relieved by those schools now supported by Catholics from their own resources. He never accepted office, but was nominated, in 1902, for Attorney General of the Liberal Democracy, composed of the friends of William Jennings Bryan, and came in largely ahead of his ticket. Contributor to the Sunday Democrat (New York) of articles on social, political and religious subjects. STODDARD, Charles Warren:

Littérateur, educator; b. 1845, in Rochester, N. Y.; ed. in schools in Western New York, and at the University of California. His untimely death at Monterey, Cal., on April 24, 1909, is regretted by all lovers of his books and writings who would have liked to see him attain a ripe old age; for this prose-poet cast his spell on all who, like him, have been gifted with a creative imagination and love of the beautiful in nature; as William Dean Howells says, "his writings have the very make of the tropic spray, which knows not if it be sea or sun." There is something vividly joyous, poignantly sorrowful, tragically beautiful in all he has written. This is especially shown forth in The Lepers of Molokai. A journey from San Francisco, by way of Cape Horn, made with an invalid brother, with subsequent voyages, one in 1864 and again in 1868, to the Hawaiian Islands, followed by a trip in 1870 to Tahiti, first gave him the material for the sketches and peoples of the South Seas. Always a dreamer, he now became more or less of a wanderer on the face of the earth. In 1873 he went to Europe as special correspondent of the San Francisco Chronicle; lived there for five years, coming back in 1878 to California, when he decided that he wanted to end his days on some island of Tranquil Delight, so he returned to his beloved Hawaiian Islands, where he abode for three years. In 1885 he was Professor of English Literature at the University of Notre Dame; in 1886 came a trip to Alaska, followed by a year in Rome (1888–89), when he was offered the Chair of English Literature at the Catholic University of America, which he accepted and held for several years. A convert to the Church, Mr. Stoddard laid bare his inner life in A Troubled Heart and How It Was Comforted at Last (Ave Maria Press, 1885), while the story of his conversion is told in Some Roads to Rome in America. These brochures, and his life of St. Anthony, the Wonder Worker of Padua, together with the incomparable sketches from his pen that appeared from time to time in the Ave Maria, showed forth the true faith of the man, the deep under current which, joined to his great literary gifts, made him, as some one has said, a man with a charm as taking as it was singular, fugitive and impossible to describe.

STORER, Hon. Bellamy:

Lawyer; United States Ambassador; b. August 28, 1847, in Cincinnati, Ohio; s. of the late Judge Bellamy and Elizabeth (Drinker) Storer; A.B., Harvard, 1867, A.M., 1870; LL.B., Cincinnati Law School, 1869; m. March 20, 1886, Maria, daughter of Joseph Longworth, of Cincinnati, Ohio. Admitted to the Ohio Bar, 1869, and since engaged in practice in Cincinnati; member of Congress, First Ohio District, 1891–95; United States Minister to Belgium, 1897–99, to Spain, 1899–1902; American Ambassador to Austria-Hungary, 1902–06. Mr. Storer entered the Church September, 1896, being received by the Rev. F. X. Lachance at Westport on Lake Champlain. In October of the same year he was confirmed by Archbishop Elder of Cincinnati. Address: Cincinnati, Ohio.

STORER, Mrs. Bellamy:

B. Maria Longworth in Cincinnati, Ohio; pupil of the Cincinnati Art School, which her father, Joseph Longworth, endowed with $300,000. After working four years, making experiments in clay decoration at the Dallas White Ware Pottery, Mrs. Storer opened a pottery which she called Rookwood, the name of her father's place on the hills beyond. This was in 1880. Nine years later this pottery had become self-supporting, and Mrs. Storer dissolved her personal association with it, leaving it in charge of William Watts Taylor, Esq., who had collaborated with her during six years. At the Paris Exposition, where she received the Gold Medal, Mrs. Storer exhibited about 20 pieces of pottery mounted in bronze, all her own work. It was an exquisite exhibition. In 1897, Mr. Storer was appointed United States Minister to Belgium, and Mrs. Storer took a Japanese artist, Asano, to Brussels to instruct her in bronze work. Two years later Mr. Storer's mission was changed to Spain, and there Mrs. Storer continued under Asano's guidance, some of the results being seen in the mounting of her pottery. In 1903 Mrs. Storer was in Colorado Springs, where she was much interested in the pottery made by Mr. Van Briggle, and became one of the directors of the Van Briggle Pottery Co. Mrs. Storer, who was brought up in the P. E. Church, was first led to consider the claims of the Church during a summer spent in Brittany where she heard a sermon on the Holy Eucharist preached by the Chaplain of a Convent where she was staying. The following year (1901) while in Washington, she heard Bishop Keane lecture at the Catholic University on Pope Leo's Encyclical on Labor; being deeply interested, she read all of the Pope's Encyclicals. A few weeks later, attracted to St. Augustine's Church by the music, she heard a sermon by Archbishop Ireland which confirmed a growing impression of the claims of the Church. On June 26, 1892, Mrs. Storer received conditional baptism, and confirmation, from Bishop Keane of the Catholic University. Address: Cincinnati, Ohio.

STORER, Horatio Robinson:

Physician; b. STROEBELE, Rev. Albert:

B. May 1, 1852, at Krauchenwies (Hohenzollern), Germany. The coat of arms of the Stroebeles is divided into four fields, two (in opposite corners) showing a lamb, the other two a Moor with a spear; an old book in the public library at Nuremberg, Bavaria, explaining this coat of arms says that the lamb signifies readiness to sacrifice even life when necessary; the Moor with a spear signifies courage. Fr. Stroebele received his preliminary education in the parochial school and college (Gymnasium) at Sigmaringen, Hohenzollern; studied philosophy in Holland, and theology in the United States. Ordained priest by the Rt. Rev. M. A. Corrigan, Bishop of Newark, N. J., March 17, 1878; appointed Rector, St. Bonaventure's Church, Paterson, N. J., afterwards becoming Rector of St. Anthony's, Butler, N. J. A desire to work among the negroes took him to St. Augustin's (colored) Church, Louisville, Ky., where he was for some time rector. Was instrumental in establishing the Catholic religion on Old Providence Island (Carribean Sea) in 1902; at that time there was but one Catholic on the Island; through the kindness of a local Baptist preacher, Rev. E. Howard, permission was obtained for holding at his church a three weeks' revival or mission, at the close of which the preacher and his flock declared themselves ready to join the Catholic Church; they were received on the day of the Feast of the Immaculate Conception, December 8, 1902. Father Stroebele afterwards came to the United States for the purpose of collecting alms, to be used to erect a new church for his converts. His Eminence Cardinal Gibbons and His Grace Archbishop Elder of Cincinnati, recommended him most cordially to their clergy. After the Church was completed, he went to Cuba, American Catholics there having clamored for an English-speaking priest. The Rev. F. St. John was appointed his successor in Old Providence, and under his charge the mission has made such progress that a second chapel has since been erected. In Piloto, Cuba, Father Stroebele built a Retiro for old missionaries wishing to retire from active life. Into this building he put all his savings, about $2,000.00, as well as $2,000.00 received from friends, and deeded it to the Archbishop of Santiago de Cuba. Contributor to several Catholic Weeklies in the United States during his missionary career, of articles describing his travels, his difficulties, and his successes in various mission fields. Visited Honduras and the Bay Islands, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, and Panama whilst doing missionary work on Old Providence Island, and as these trips had to be made in small sailing boats (no steamers going at that time), he was more than once in danger of death, every year a number of boats being capsized in the stormy sea. Once the negroes making up the crew of the boat lost their course, the compass having gotten out of order, and the missionary, together with the crew, had to undergo an enforced fast of fourteen days before they sighted land. Address: Nuevitas (Tiffin), Cuba.

SULLIVAN, Jeremiah Francis:

Jurist; b. August 19, 1851; at Canaan, Conn.; s. of Michael Sullivan, native of Ireland, who emigrated to Connecticut, then removed to California in 1852, and from there to Nevada, in 1862. Michael Sullivan was a man of sound judgment, ready wit, and excellent memory. His early schooling in books was of the most meagre character, but he educated himself by observation and reflection, and such direct study as his little leisure allowed, thus becoming familiar with the history of the United States. He was a most ardent admirer of the institutions of our Government, and though never a seeker of public office, he felt a lively interest and took an active part in politics. He despised pot-house tricksters and bosses, and never hesitated, on occasion, to oppose or defy them. His criterion was principle, and he would suffer any sacrifice rather than compromise with dishonor. Jeremiah Sullivan's childhood was passed at Nevada City, the center of a rich mining district, in which were gathered a number of men of extraordinary talent, especially lawyers, who subsequently distinguished themselves throughout the Pacific Coast. There he received lessons in a private school until his parents sent him to San Francisco and he entered St. Ignatius College, graduating therefrom as bachelor of arts; he afterwards received from that institution the degree of master of arts; Professor of the classics and mathematics in St. Ignatius College, San Francisco, at the same time studying law; admitted to practice in 1874. M. in 1876, Ellen, d. of George D. Bliss, California pioneer. Elected a member of the Board of Education in 1877; Judge of the Superior Court (1879); re-elected Judge (1885) and resigned in 1889. Now practicing law in partnership with his brother, Matthew I. Sullivan. As Judge of the Superior Court, Judge Sullivan was called on to settle several celebrated law suits, among others that of Sarah Althea Hill vs. U. S. Senator Sharon; of this, the New York Tribune said: The decision of Judge Sullivan in the Sharon-Hill case may be a surprise to many. For while the case has from the first been full of surprises, and while the course of the plaintiff and her counsel has often been such as to create prejudice against her, there have been so many points incompatible with the hypothesis of bold, wholesale fraud, that the most cautious observers have hesitated to form definite conclusions. But of Judge Sullivan's capacity, and lofty integrity, there has never been any question among the lawyers of California. He bears the highest reputation for fidelity to duty, diligence, and intellectual acumen, and any decision from him carries much more than ordinary weight. Is president of the Young Men's Institute, and is identified with fraternal and benevolent works of other Catholic Societies. Address: San Francisco, Cal.

SUTTON, John Patrick:

Editor; b. September 18, 1845, at Clonmel, Ireland; descended from Roger de Sutton, a Norman-Welsh Knight who invaded Ireland in May, 1169. The family became Hibernis ipsis Hiberniores and in the fifteenth century an ancestor, Gerald Sutton, was collecting the blackmail of the Kavanaugh clan from the English settlers and towns. In 1643 William Sutton was a member of the famous parliament held by the Catholic Confederation in Kilkenny. In 1649 his Castle was besieged by the Cromwellian forces. He repulsed the assailants. They returned with reinforcements and William, refusing to surrender, perished in the flames with 23 of his household. His son and another escaped, and from this son Mr. Sutton draws his lineage. By confiscation the family was reduced to the rank and condition of peasants. One branch, the Suttons of Clonard, fled to France and were ennobled by Louis XIV. Marshal Bugeaud Duc d'Isly and conqueror of Algiers, was the son of Catharine Sutton de Clonard, a member of that family. John P. Sutton was educated at St. Stanislaus College (S.J.), Ireland; m. TABB, Rev. John Banister:

Poet, educator; b. at The Forest, Amelia County, Virginia, March 22, 1845; s. of Thomas Yelverton Tabb; ed. by private tutors; appointed in his seventeenth year captain's clerk to the blockade runner, Robert E. Lee, in which he passed the enemy between Wilmington and the islands of Nassau and Bermuda some twenty odd times; taken prisoner and held at Point Lookout, Md., for seven months, where he met Sidney Lanier; after the war, studied music in Baltimore; later instructor of English at Racine College, Wis.; received into the Church by Cardinal Gibbons, September 8, 1872, entering St. Charles College, Ellicott City, Md., in November of the same year, to prepare for the priesthood; instructor at St. Peter's School, Richmond, 1875; completed theological studies at St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore; ordained, 1884, after which he became an instructor at St. Charles College. Author of Poems (Small, Maynard & Co., Boston); Lyrics (same publisher); Bone Rules; or The Skeleton of English Grammar, written for the use of his class; Quips and Quiddits, etc. Father Tabb died in 1909. Although, toward the close of his life, totally blind, his sense of humor was unfailing. Even his affliction he made the subject of puns. Who is speaking about my demise (dim eyes)? he demanded, overhearing two students commenting on his bad sight. I am very much alive. Once while he was in conversation with the late Bishop Curtis, of Baltimore, the latter remarked: I shall meet His Eminence, Cardinal Gibbons, to-morrow; do you want me to ask from him any favor for you? Father Tabb replied: Oh, ask him to give me a see. Father Tabb was known among British critics, as the foremost American poet of the day. Eccentric, a recluse, he was withal tender and sympathetic; much beloved by the students, to whom he was indeed Father Tabb.

TAPPERT, Rev. Henry:

B. in Düren, Rhineland, Germany, April 9, 1855, and ordained priest by the Rt. Rev. Augustus Toebbe, Bishop of Covington, Ky., May 22, 1879. His uncle, Rev. Henry Tappert, was one of the first Redemptorist Fathers, who came to the United States, and to his zealous efforts much of the success of the early missions in the East and North is due. In Germany the subject of this sketch attended the Elementary schools and Classical College, completing his Theological course at Mt. St. Mary's Seminary of the West, Cincinnati, Ohio. Since April 2, 1907, he has been Rector of the Church of the Mother of God, Covington, Ky., succeeding his brother, Rev. Wm. Tappert, who died March 18, 1907, in the sixtieth year of his age. Previous to this he was Assistant Pastor with his brother, Rev. Wm. Tappert (from December 12, 1879). Father Henry Tappert's whole life, from earliest youth has been one of devotion to the Church, to educational and philanthropic enterprises. He enjoys an enviable reputation as a composer, his Masses, Motets, Cantus Eucharistici, songs in honor of the Blessed Virgin and various contributions to Church music being widely and favorably known. He is one of the acknowledged pioneers in the work for the reform of church music in America, having labored zealously for more than thirty years along these lines, and his interpretation of the Holy Father's wishes in this regard are considered authoritative. The Holy Father Pope Pius X honored him A.D., 1905 with the Papal Decoration: Cross pro Ecclesia et Pontifice. He is a frequent contributor to Caecilia, the American Organ for Church music, and to Catholic weekly papers. He has made the tour of Europe three times, making a special study of the musical and educational conditions of Italy, France, and Germany. Address: 79 West Sixth St., Covington, Ky.

Littérateur; b. November 23, 1863, Florence, Italy; brought to America when 9 years old, by his father, Robert Walsh; ed. Georgetown University, Washington, D. C. (degree of B.A.); entered journalism, as reporter on the Philadelphia Times; took charge of the Mansfield (Pa.) Advertiser; left there to become Manager of the Catholic World, contributing at about the same time to the International Cyclopedia; served for three years as literary editor of Lippincott's Magazine, and for a while as co-editor of the Smart Set, which so often stirs up the American fashionable world by its pungent and witty paragraphs. Acted as correspondent for the New York Herald, and Harper's Weekly during the Spanish American War, and also started, in association with W. S. Walsh, American Notes and Queries, a most valuable and interesting publication, highly esteemed by literary people. Mr. Walsh is probably best known as an intrepid traveler in strange countries, embracing every clime from the Arctic to near the equator. London Table Talk has said of him: Few men have such a relish for exploration as Mr. Walsh. It seems like the other day that we heard of him as a member of a party of Arctic adventurers, and the delights of being shipwrecked in Polar waters were described in a very instructive manner in the book which he entitled, The Last Cruise of the Miranda. His daring horseback ride through Morocco has probably made him more known than any other of his wanderings. In addition to the work already mentioned, he is author of By the Potomac, and other Poems, and The White World. At present he is editor of The Travel Magazine. Was one of the organizers of the Arctic Club of America, and is now Secretary of the Explorers Club. Address: Faculty Club, Columbia University, New York City.

WARD, Hon. George Cabot:

Lawyer, diplomat; b. March 17, 1876, in New York City. His father's family, originally from the County of Kent, England, came over with Endicott to Salem, Mass., in the early colonial days; they engaged extensively in the East India Trade but more recently for several generations the family has represented in Boston and later in New York the famous English banking house of Baring Bros. Mrs. Samuel Gray Ward, Mr. Ward's grandmother, was a notable convert to the Church. She and her husband had been closely associated with the leading spirits of the Brook Farm Colony and were intimate friends of Keats, Emerson and Longfellow. She was a benefactress of many of the Jesuit good works and had the reputation of having made more converts than any other Catholic woman in the United States. In later years her children followed her one by one into the Church. One of her daughters married Baron von Hoffman, of the well-known family of Leipzig. Another married Baron Ernst von Schönberg Roth Schönberg, one of the most ancient families in Europe and hereditary chamberlains to the King of Saxony, at Dresden. Pope Leo XIII conferred upon Baron Schönberg the title of Excellenza. He has for many years been one of the Chief Chamberlains at the Vatican. Mr. Ward's father married Miss Sophia Ridgeley Howard of Maryland. The original Howard was a son of the Howard family of Norfolk, England, whose chief representative is the Duke of Norfolk. One of the sons of the Duke of that day became a Protestant and settled in Howard County, Maryland, after coming to the Colonies. Mr. Ward's grandmother, Howard, with her children, including his mother, returned to the old faith. Mr. Ward is a great-great-grandson of General John Eager Howard, who won the battle of Cowpens in the War of the Revolution, was Secretary of War under Washington's administration, and later Governor of Maryland. General Howard married Peggy Chew, of Philadelphia, famous in Revolutionary times. George Cabot Ward was educated at private schools in New York and Lenox, Mass., Cutler's School, New York, and Harvard University (1898); took Harvard Law School course, became a member of the New York Bar and Managing Clerk of New York firm of Peckham, Starr and Miller; in Auditing Department of Washington Insurance Co.; Secretary to Hon. W. W. Rockhill, then at head of Bureau of American Republics; practiced law in New York to December 15, 1905, then appointed Auditor of Island of Porto Rico by President Roosevelt, where he reorganized the system of auditing and accounting, putting all the Government administration on a business basis; was a member of the Governor's Cabinet and of the Upper House of Legislature of Porto Rico; Chairman of Committee on Finance and Appropriations of Executive Council or Senate; is member of several commissions; aided in settlement of claims of the Church against government of Porto Rico and U. S. arising under transfer of Sovereignty from Spain; was appointed by President Taft, Secretary of State and Vice-Governor of Porto Rico, August 25, 1909; elected President of Executive Council, or Senate, of Porto Rico, August 28, 1909; speaks fluently Spanish, French and German; has traveled in U. S. and Canada, and made several trips to Europe; went across the center of the Mountains from Hayti to the Eastern extremity of Santo Domingo on horseback, to study conditions. Is a member of Knights of Columbus, and has been active in extending the order in the West Indies. Member of the American Academy of Political and Social Science; American Political Science Association, American Association for Labor Legislation; National Association of Comptrollers and Accounting Officers; Association of American Government Accountants; Anti-Tuberculosis League of Porto Rico; Sociedad Protectora de Mendigos, and Casino Español de San Juan, P. WRIGHT, Mrs. Lida (Whitefield):

Author, journalist; b. at La Grange, N. C. Descended on the father's side from a Virginia family and on the mother's from Irish Protestants of North Carolina. Contributor in prose and verse to numerous periodicals and newspapers, including the Catholic Sun of Syracuse, and the old Catholic Mirror of Baltimore. From long having cherished in scrap books and loving memory the poems of Father Ryan, the poet priest of the South, Mrs. Wright, her brother, and sisters, while still in their teens, were led to think of the Catholic Church. Brought up without religious instruction, the relative value of Baptist and Methodist doctrines were compared and found wanting, and purely as a venture they wrote to a Catholic priest in a neighboring city, whose name they had seen in the social news of a local paper. He wrote to them after an interval of three months, recommending The Faith of our Fathers and Catholic Belief; these books were secured and read, and when finally the brother and sisters announced that they wished to become Catholics, they met with such determined opposition that they were on the point of turning back. Then there came to the elder sister a strange dream. She saw, as in a vision, a bearded man, of Apostolic mien, wearing a brown robe, with sandals on his feet, and a rope or girdle around his waist. He stood, as it were, at the foot of a staircase, and while they stood troubled and doubtful, he said: Go up, my children, you are right. Encouraged by this dream, the brother and sisters were soon baptized, an apt illustration of the value of Catholic literature in the hands of Protestants. They count among those instrumental in their conversion, Father Thomas F. Price, the beloved missionary priest of North Carolina. Address: 49 Old Jamestown Road, Williamsburg, Va.

WYNNE, Rev. John J., S.J.:

B. in New York, September 30, 1859; ed. by the Christian Brothers, 1865–69; graduated from St. Francis Xavier's College, 1876. Entered the Jesuit Novitiate. Ordained priest August 25, 1890; appointed assistant to the Director of Apostleship of Prayer in the United States, 1891. Director of the Association, and editor of the Messenger of the Sacred Heart, 1892; the Magazine was later subdivided into two publications becoming known as the Messenger, a monthly magazine which, under Father Wynne's leadership attained a high standard, and the Messenger of the Sacred Heart, or little Messenger as it is affectionately called, devoted principally to the interests of the Apostleship of Prayer. Through the pages of the Messenger, which dealt with all the current topics of the day, Catholic history, doctrine, interests, and activities gained merited recognition, and the Editor became known as a fearless champion for the rights of Catholics to fair play and truthful representation in non-Catholic magazines and publications. Recognizing the power of a representative Catholic press, Father Wynne became the originator of the Jesuit weekly review, America, which superseded the Messenger. First published in April, 1909, it had an immediate success as filling a place long vacant in Catholic literature; Father Wynne was also the inaugurator of the Catholic Encyclopedia, an idea that had long lain dormant in the minds of English speaking Catholics, but which reached its initial stage when Father Wynne gathered around him, in 1904, the editorial and business factors of the enterprise. This was followed, in 1907, by a trip to Europe in the interests of both projects, during which the great universities and literary centres of England, France, Germany, Belgium, Holland, and Italy were visited by the Rev. Editor, and a distinguished body of contributors was secured for the Encyclopedia, and an equally brilliant staff of correspondents engaged for the new review. In April 1910 Father Wynne resigned the Editorship of America in order to devote all his time to the Encyclopedia, which at the present date although not yet finished, promises to be a monument to the patience, ability, and devotion of the Associate Editors. Address: Fordham University, Fordham, N. Y.

XAVIER, Mother M.:

B. Mary Xavier Mehegan, in Cork, Ireland; came to America when a child. Entered the Novitiate of the Sisters of Charity at St. Joseph's Convent, 35 East Broadway, N. Y., in 1846. In 1859, Sister Mary Xavier, three other Sisters, and five novices of the same Order, opened the first Convent in Newark, N. J., in the old Ward Mansion, Washington and Bleecker Sts. Here they had a school and later the first Catholic Hospital in New Jersey. On July 2, 1860, the Sisters left this site and took possession of a house near Madison, once owned by Madame Chegary, a famous New York school teacher of the early part of the nineteenth century, and from 1856 to 1860 used as the first residence of Seton Hall College. This property has since been largely added to, owing to the foresight of Mother Xavier, and is one of the most valuable properties in New Jersey. It is now the Mother House of the community, and adjoining it is St. Elizabeth's, the first Catholic College for women in the U. S. (founded 1899). Mother Xavier, the only survivor of the original community, built up the present great community of 1,100 Sisters working in the Archdioceses of Boston and New York, and in the Dioceses of Newark, Trenton, and Hartford; and having under their direction and care six academies, a preparatory school for boys, 67 parochial schools, with 41,000 pupils, 5 orphanages, 5 hospitals, a home for incurables, a home for the aged, a foundling asylum, and two day nurseries. WHY IS IT that so many of the crosses erected in the cemeteries, lack that feeling of repose so characteristic of the ancient crosses?

BECAUSE

they have been made by those having but a superficial knowledge of the subject.

The Making of Correct Crosses has been our study for years, and our crosses are properly made, in line, proportion, detail and symbolism

No cross is too small or simple to receive the required thought. Nor none too large.

Durable = Noiseless = Cheap

Ruberoid excels in these three vital points—

Use it on church isles instead of grass matting—on halls and corridors instead of rubber matting or linoleum.

Because—Ruberoid outwears all these—surface is permanent—it's waterproof—sanitary, noiseless, easy to keep clean without removing—and it's much cheaper, too.

Something different and better than you have ever used.

Made in attractive colors. Send for samples and prices.

GOD:

HIS KNOWABILITY, ESSENCE, AND ATTRIBUTES

A DOGMATIC TREATISE

Prefaced by a Brief General Introduction to the Study of Dogmatic Theology

BY THE REV. JOSEPH POHLE, Ph.D., D.D.,

Formerly Professor of Apologetics in the Catholic University of America, now Professor of Dogma in the University of Breslau

Authorized English Version with Some Abridgment and Added References

BY ARTHUR PREUSS

Cloth, 8vo. 479 pages, net $2.00. Postpaid, $2.15

¶ Dr. Pohle's famous Lehrbuch der Dogmatik has reached five editions in less than a decade. This is the first volume of an authorized English translation and comprises the "Gotteslehre" (De Deo Uno). It is complete in itself.

The second volume of the series, to be issued about Sept. 1st, 1911, will contain the treatise on the Divine Trinity. The remaining volumes are to follow at the rate of two per annum.

One of the French theological reviews not long ago published a "symposium" of opinions on manuals of theology, in which the chief suggestions, agreed upon by a large number of theological professors, were these:

(1.) The ideal manual should sacrifice questions of merely Scholastic controversy; (2) it should pay due attention to the latest researches in the history of dogma; (3) it should be philosophical in its doctrinal exposition; (4) it should be discriminative in its choice of proofs from Holy Scripture and the Fathers; (5) it should be more careful than the average textbook of the validity of arguments from "theological reason;" and (6) it should be written in the vernacular, aim at conciseness and strength in style, and be equipped with an up-to-date bibliography.

Competent critics agree that Pohle's Lehrbuch fulfills all these requirements.

Mr. Preuss has paid due attention to the English literature of the subject, as will appear from the annotations and bibliographical references. The translation has been revised by several competent American theologians and by the reverend author himself.

THEOLOGY OF THE SACRAMENTS

A STUDY IN POSITIVE THEOLOGY

BY THE VERY REV. P. POURRAT, V. G.

Rector of the Theological Seminary in Lyons (France). Authorized Translation from the Third French Edition.

Cloth, 8vo. XVI & 417 pages. Net, $1.50.

The present book deals with that branch of its subject known as "The Sacraments in General," and follows in the main the time-honored division of that treatise. The definition of a Sacrament, its composition, its efficacy, the Sacramental Character, the number of the Sacraments, their divine institution, and the intention required in minister and recipient, from the headings of the chapters.

The historical side of the questions, a side which has come to be of such prime importance in present-day theology, and in Sacramental theology in particular, is in the main, well and fully treated. Many citations from the Fathers add interest to the work, and the translation seems sufficiently accurate.—America.

HISTORY OF DOGMAS

VOLUME ONE

BY J. TIXERONT

440 pages. Cloth, 8vo. Net, $1.50.

"Multum in parvo" feebly expresses the content of this comparatively small volume which combines severity of scientific form with abundance of material. Quality is harder to achieve than quantity. An extensive literature accompanies each topic treated, and there is a terseness of style and limpidity also, which makes the book readable as one runs. One might truly say, that this work furnishes an almost continuous translation of the authors studied. The most striking feature is the sympathetic method employed by the author who treats Christian thought as a living continuity animated by the soul of the "traditio semper viva." It is a method of this kind which will deprive the mechanical treatment followed by rationalists of its force. These are pleased to regard Christianity as a fossil to be exhumed out of early documents; for with them Christianity is primarily a book embodying beliefs that need to be reconstructed in their original simplicity. Hence their favorite geological similes of "layers," "strata," "additions," "foreign elements," and "corruptions." The author effectively destroys the force of this mechanical method by the principle of living continuity, which is the Catholic stronghold. Christian faith is not a problem of addition, but one of growth and development. He points the way for many who will follow. We bespeak for him and his volume the attention of all our readers.

THE DUBLIN REVIEW

NEW SERIES.

WILFRID WARD . . . . Editor
B. W. DEVAS . . . . Sub-Editor

Issued Quarterly:
Yearly Subscription, Free by Mail, $5.00

—The Dublin Review, so often quoted and commended by us, is the oldest and unquestionably the ablest Catholic periodical in the English language. Indeed, its high standard of literary excellence and critical scholarship is probably unsurpassed by any periodical in the world. English-speaking Catholics may well feel proud of this review. Under the able editorship of Dr. Wilfrid Ward, whose program from the first has been guided by the desire to combine close attention to the intellectual and literary movements of the day, with absolute loyalty to the Church and the Holy See, the historic Dublin Review, as Newman called it, has begun a new era of prosperity and progress. Its circulation is increasing among English-speaking Catholics everywhere; and its influence on those outside the Church becoming more and more marked. It is almost a reproach to any club or reading room not to be provided with the Dublin.—Ave Maria.

THE MONTH

A CATHOLIC MAGAZINE

Edited by the Rev. JOHN GERARD, S. J.

Issued Monthly. Yearly subscription, free by mail, $3.00.

THE MONTH, which was established in 1864, deals primarily with subjects of current interest to the Catholic body, but also publishes articles of a more general character. It devotes particular attention to points of Catholic apologetic and to reviews of contemporary literature at home and abroad.

ROBERT HUGH BENSON

Cloth, 8vo. 225 pages. Net $1.00.

"There is scarcely a dull line in the book; men of the world as well as theologians will read it with pleasure, and preachers will find in it treasures of instruction and especially of illustration for their sermons and discourses. The author has a pithy way of expressing a thought, that will suggest a whole series of meditations."—America.

The Three Fundamental Principles of the Spiritual Life

...BY...

MORITZ MESCHLER, S. J.

Cloth, 8vo. 240 Pages. Net $1.00.

The purpose of Father Meschler in writing this book was to provide a compendium of the spiritual life which would be within the reach of all Christians, no matter what their circumstances. To this end he reduces Christian practice to three fundamental principles—prayer, self-denial and the love of our Lord. Each of these principles is treated of in simple, intimate but solid manner, all essential points being touched upon briefly, concisely, but at the same time very clearly. In spite of the brevity of the work it glows with enthusiasm and is almost affectionate in its style, so that the reader feels as if he had been talking with a loving friend. It is characteristic of Father Meschler to invest his writings with that joy which belongs of right to the Christian but is too often lost sight of.

WORKS OF FICTION

BY

REV. ROBERT HUGH BENSON

"Little can be added to the chorus of generous praise with which these volumes have been greeted. They reveal a master-worker in this field of literature, a writer who possesses not only the descriptive charms of Thackeray or Scott, with the deep pathos of Dickens, but also in an eminent degree, the power of a great ethical teacher."

THE MAGIC OF THE SEA

OR

Commodore John Barry in the Making

BY CAPTAIN JAMES CONNOLLY

Cloth, 8vo. 560 pages Retail $1.50

The characters are certainly red-blooded men and women, who in their various parts of the more dramatic scenes hold the interest to the end. Nearly every one of the absorbing incidents enacted against the true historical background has a peculiar appeal of its own. The movement of the story never lags till the hero, serving as Barry's first lieutenant, wins the last sea fight of the war.

THE CENTURION

A Romance of the Time of the Messiah

BY A. B. ROUTHIER

TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH BY LUCILLE PAPIN BORDEN

Cloth, 8vo. 390 pages Retail $1.50

"It is a well-written and well-informed sketch of the times in which Christ chose to appear among men, and it endeavors to explain, not without success, the various steps that led the Jewish nation to perpetrate the greatest crime in history. When we say that the narrative reads like an original work we think no higher praise can be given the translation."—America.

MEZZOGIORNO

BY

JOHN AYSCOUGH

Cloth, 8vo. 410 pages Retail $1.50

" 'Mezzogiorno' may be described as one of those distinctly superior books from which even the least serious reader must derive profit as well as pleasure. It alone would entitle John Ayscough to high rank among contemporary writers of fiction."—Ave Maria.

GIANNELLA

BY

MRS. HUGH FRASER

Cloth, 8vo. 360 pages Retail $1.50

" 'Giannella' is a Catholic novel in every sense of the word. It is a deliciously quaint tale af Italian life. It is the Harland Italy Mrs. Fraser introduces us into, not the Crawford Italy. In this novel the heroine is a waif, when we first meet her. But her nurse, who is a strong-minded and most delightful soul, steers her cleverly through the dark eclipse of her fortunes into wealth and marriage. Her characters are distinctly drawn and move and speak naturally. The cardinal is splendid; whilst the villain is not such a bad fellow after all— which is as it should be."—America.
